GOMPERS OUT IN HOT REPLY

Retorts to Criticism of Labor on Account of Dynamiting Cases.

TAKES A RAP AT JUDGE ANDERSON

Says Union Will Not Be Left to Mercy of Organized Capital.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking today before the senate sub-committee on judiciary in favor of the Clayton anti-injunction and contempt bills, gave answer to criticisms aimed at the organization of workers which he heads because of the trial and conviction for dynamiting, of officers of the Structural Iron Workers' union.

"If ever the time shall come," said Mr. Gompers in the climax of his address, "when government by dynamite shall be attempted, (and let us hope and work that it never shall) it will have as its main cause the theory and policy upon which is based government by injunction-personal government foisted upon our people instead of a government by law."

Will Not Repudiate.

In his closing statement which included an assault upon employers and manufacturers' associations, particularly of the United States Steel corporation and the National Erectors' association, Mr. Gompers declared that organized labor would not repudiate the Structural Iron Workers' unions "and leave them helpless and at the mercy of organized capital and insatiable, unsurbed greed for profits."

"Though all censure those whom men may deem guilty of dynamite conspiracy," the federation leader continued, "none feels the terrible consequences of the Indianapolis trial more keenly than the men of organized labor. There have been added heartaches and sorrow to our already heavy burdens. The men accused and sentenced cannot suffer the penalties alone—upon them and all working men fall the suffering and penalty.

Conspiracy of Capital.

"But what of the conspiracy of organized capital—the conspiracy to murder the liberty of the toilers, to tear from them the means of protection by which they have bettered their condition, to leave them bare and defenseless in the competitive struggle. Is not such a conspiracy sufficiently detestible to incur some odium? Should the conspirators with their hands stained with life blood of men's ambition, happiness, liberty, be accorded nothing but honor, power, respectability? Should they be allowed to continue to manipulate the powers of government the administration of justice until the oppressed find the burden intolerable?

"More wise it is to seek social justice while yet we may. The judge who presided at the trial realized one of the issues—government injunction, lawless, autocratic, irresponsible exercise of governmental authority, according privileges to the strong and denying justice to the weak."

Judge Anderson, who presided over the trial o fthe iron workers, was referred to particularly by Mr. Gompers,

JUDGE'S WIFE AS A WITNESS

Mrs. Archbold Says Trip to Europe Was But a Family Affair.

CANNON A COUSIN OF JURIST'S WIFE

Woman Ttestifying in Senate Chamber is Unusual Scene.

Washington, Jan. 6. The unusual scene of a woman testifying in the senate chamber was witnessed today at the impeachment trial, when Mrs. Archbald, wife of the accused judge of the commerce court, took the stand to testify of her family relationship with Henry W. Cannon. One of the charges against Judge Archbald is that he accepted Cannon's hospitality on a trip to Europe and that Cannon, as a director in steamship companies and railroads, was a possible litigant before his court. Mrs. Archbald testified she was a cousin to Mr. Cannon and that she had often been on trips with him and his family and recounted several journeys with the Cannons to support the contention of the defense that the trip to Europe was more or less of a family affair and nothing unusual.

Mr. Cannon was a director in the Great Northern railroad, Lake Erie and Western and other lines. Mrs. Archbald said the invitation to take the trip was given to her personally, not to Judge Archbald.

Wife Urged Him to Go.

"I talked it over with Judge Archbald and urged him very strongly to go," said Mrs. Archbald. He talked it over with friends and decided to go."

The climax of the trial was reached when the senate court reconvened today, prepared to hear the testimony of Judge Archbald himself and of Mrs. Archbald. The accused jurist had determined, after consultation with his attorneys to take the stand to answer personally questions as to his relations with railroad officials and charges that he had used his judicial office to influence railroads to make advantageous coal land deals with him in the Scranton Pennsylvania, field.

Judge and Mrs. Archbald were the only witnesses remaining to be called for the defense. The latter appeared to tell of the kinship between herself and Henry W. Cannon, whose invitation to Archbald to enjoy an European trip at his expense has been brought into the impeachment case as indicating Judge Archbald's receipt of favors from possible litigants.

WOMEN GO BACK TO HOME TASKS

Hatfield's Feminine Policemen Quit the Job Until Next Sunday.

FORCE A CLOSED TOWN

Hatfield, Ind., Jan. 6. With the passing of Sunday, the self-appointed women policemen who were on duty all day yesterday and "Connecticut blue laws" went out of existence here. The women, who are members of the W. C. T. U., returned to their household duties and it is possible to buy a package of chewing gum without going through all the formalities of entering a "blind tiger."

The women had regular beats and every business house in town was closed.

Several dealers, it was said, "bootlegged" candy and chewing gum so that the young men of the town did not have to go empty handed when they called on their "best girls" last night.

The women say they propose to keep the town closed on Sundays.

PLAYFUL CAT BLAMED FOR LOGANSPORT FIRE.

Logansport, Ind., Jan. 6.—A playful cat is believed to have caused the fire which practically destroyed the L. G. Hanna feed store early today. It is thought the cat, while playing, struck the key of a switch connecting with a motor and burned out the motor, thus setting fire to the building. The loss was several thousand dollars.

TWO SAVED FROM DROWNING IN SKATING ACCIDENT AT SWINNEY PARK.

The honor of saving two young boys from drowning in Swinney park Saturday belongs to William S. O'Rourke, jr., of 1401 West Washington street, and Henry Roesener, 1428 Stophlet street. The lads who broke through the ice were Edward and Harold Huhn, aged 13 and 11, respectively, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Huhn, 1111 Swinney avenue.

Harold was skating past the drinking fountain at the park and, striking a stretch of thin ice, broke through. The older brother also went into the icy water in an ineffectual attempt to rescue Harold. The lake was crowded with skaters, but young O'Rourke was the only one of the number to make any effort to get to the place where the boys had fallen into the water. Mr. Roesener, who is the manager of the Pure Water company, was filling some bottles at the fountain, picked up a long piece of hose that he uses in filling the bottles and threw it to O'Rourke, who had jumped into the lake and caught hold of the first boy he reached. In this way Edward Huhn was towed to the bank. Noticing that the younger boy was fast drowning Mr. Roesner went into the lake and brought him to the shore.

EDWARD AND HAROLD HUHN, Rescued From Drowning in Skating Mishap at Swinney Park.

The boys were wrapped up in warm coats by the other skaters and taken home. They have practically recovered from the ill effects of their experience.

COUNTY FAIRS TO URGE STATE AID

Want Indiana to Help Pay Premiums in Certain Classes.

WHAT MANAGERS SAY

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6. The Indiana County Fair association managers, in session here today, expect to ask the general assembly to pass a law for state aid to county fairs by paying cash to the credit of the county associations to be used in paying premiums for live stock and agricultural products.

Representative John Isenbarger, of North Manchester, who is also a member of the association of county fair managers, will be asked to introduce the bill at the approaching session. Its terms have not been agreed upon in detail. The fair managers feel that a percent of the monies paid out for premiums should be paid by the state. At the present time appropriations for county fairs are paid from the county funds.

Representative Isenbarger expects to have the co-operation of the state board of agriculture for this measure. The county fair men believe that state aid to their annual exhibitions by enabling them to give more and larger premiums, will encourage young men to stay upon the farm.

BOSS PAINTERS' STATE MEETING

Some 300 Expected to Attend Fourth Annual Convention.

TO OPEN TOMORROW

Between two and three hundred members of the Indiana State Association of Master House Painters and Decorators are expected in the city tomorrow morning to attend the opening sessions of the fourth annual convention, which begins at 10:30 o'clock at Odeon hall on West Main street. The convention will continue until the evening of January 10.

Handsome souvenir programs for the convention have just been issued, and it is announced that between fifty and seventy five of the leading firms of the country will have exhibits on the third floor of the convention hall.

President O. S. Jones, of this city, will call the convention to order and will introduce Rev. Arthur J. Folsom, who will pronounce the invocation. Mayor Jesse Grice will deliver the address of welcome, and will be followed by an address by President Theodore Thieme, of the Fort Wayne Commercial club. The president's address will follow the roll call of officers and the appointment of committees.

The Officers.

Officers of the state association are as follows:

OPENED SHOPS AT MIDNIGHT

Horseshoers Do a Lively Business in Early Morning Hours

CITY IS ICE-COVERED

Following close on the heels of Fort Wayne's first storm of the winter comes official announcement from the weather bureau that a cold wave, accompanied by all the elements of an old-fashioned wintry blizzard, is due in Fort Wayne some time this evening. The official prediction made by W. S. Palmer, local forecaster, is for snow and much colder this evening, with a cold wave followed by fair and colder tomorrow.

The city was practically ice bound during the night and this morning. For the first time in many years many of the city blacksmith shops remained open all night, and it is estimated by some of the leading horseshoers that between 400 and 500 horses were equipped with rough shoes between midnight and 6 o'clock this morning. Proprietors of horseshoeing establishments opened their places of business at midnight, and were working with extra help during the night. The ring of the anvil was heard in all parts of the business district, and a waiting line of horses formed in front of many of the leading shops.

Night Worst in Years.

One of the city's veteran horseshoers declared that last night was the worst in many years on horses not equipped with proper shoes for winter. Calls were sent in from all portions of the city, and to get the horses to the shops it was necessary for their old shoes to be removed in the barns, as it was found that they could stand upon their feet better without shoes which were not properly fitted for such weather.

The sidewalks and streets were covered with a heavy coating of ice, sleet and snow, and traffic was almost impossible. Trolley trouble occurred on practically every electric line operating into the city, and all interurban cars were off schedule by almost an hour.

Numerous minor accidents were reported, but at this time it is believed they were mostly of minor severity.

The storm of last night was accompanied by thunder and a brilliant display of lightning. This is very unusual for this season of the year, and it is said that the thunder storm spread throughout the whole of northern Indiana. It was the first winter thunder storm since February 21 of last year.

ZERO IS INDIANAPOLIS WEATHER MAN'S GUESS.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6.—Zero weather by tomorrow morning was the cold wave warning posted by the local weather bureau for Indiana today. The earlier prediction was for snow and colder, but the hurried approach of the cold wave from the northwest caused the weather officials later to send a special cold wave warning throughout the state. Just how low the temperature would go was not indicated, other than it would reach zero.

RAILROADS WIN IMPORTANT CASE

Liability Contracts Not Subject to State Statutes.

MATTER INTER-STATE

Washington, Jan. 6.—Railroads and express companies today won a revolutionary decision in the supreme court when it was held that contracts limiting to small sums their liability for loss of shipments were not subject to state laws but to interstate laws. It was further held that contracts limiting liability to a small sum in return for a low rate were not in violation of the interstate commerce laws, particularly the Carmack amendment.

Scores upon scores of such contracts have been held void under state laws.

The court today held that the plan advanced by Union Pacific attorney for the disposition of the entire stock holding of the Union Pacific Railroad company in the Southern Pacific company by transfer to the stockholders of the Union Pacific company would not so effectually end the Union Pacific merger as to comply with its dissolution decree.

The supreme court concluded its decisions today without announcing those on the state cases.

TAFT'S NEXT TRIP TO BE A BUSY ONE

President Plans to Crowd Much Activity Into Three Days.

A TRIO OF SPEECHES

Washington, Jan. 6.—Plans for President Taft's next trip, made public at the White house today, show that he will be away from the capital three days, make at least three speeches and attend a meeting of the Yale corporation. It is probable that at the Yale corporation meeting the president will announce his acceptance of the Kent professorship of law at that university.

The president's first stop will be in Philadelphia, where on the night of January 12 he will attend the dinner of the Clover club. The next night he will be a guest at a dinner in New York in honor of former President White, of Cornell university and on Sunday, January 19, will attend the general conference of the Order of B'nai B'rith. The Yale corporation meeting will be January 20 and the president expects to start back to Washington that night.

DISEASE IS EPIDEMIC

Spinal Meningitis Sweeping Little Town of Gale, Ill.

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 6.—The town of Gale, Ill., thirty miles north of here, is suffering from an epidemic of spinal meningitis. John Chism and his three sons died of the disease ast night. Three other members of the famiy are ill.

COOK'S FOES TO WAGE WAR

Will Oppose Selection of Indianapolis Man as Speaker.

LEGISLATORS ARE NOW GATHERING IN

Some Lively Contests for Places in the New Legislature.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6.—Opposition to the naming of Homer L. Cook, of Indianapolis, speaker of the house of the next general assembly, is expected to develop here this evening when legislators begin to arrive. It was learned today that a meeting of Cook's opponents will be held this evening and if sufficient votes can be mustered to make a fight the selection of Representative Cook will be contested.

It was said that Representative Emmett C. Mitchell, of Salem, and John C. Branaman, of Brownstown, will lead the opposition. They are expected in the city late today.

M. L. Priellin, who is championing the name of Samuel N. Quillen, of Linton, for chief clerk of the house, says that he is assured of the support of about forty of the young members, and believes that he has a chance to win.

Charles J. Stewart, of Lebanon, the home city of Governor-elect Ralston, arrived here today. He is mentioned as the choice of the democratic majority for the house mastership.

The senate postmastership was still open today, according to leaders.

The entrance of Douglas Bolser, of New Castle, in the contest for chief door keeper of the house, has complicated the selection of a man for that place, according to legislators who are here. It is held improbable that the democratic majority will name both Homer L. Cook, of this city, and Frank Swett, also of dianapolis, for positions. If Swett is eliminated the race seems to be between Bolser and David Poer, of Gwynneville.

John F. Patton, of Vevay, editor of the Vevay Democrat, is in the city promoting his candidacy for registry clerk.

It is expected that the "plunder" committee of the house will recommend that each democratic representative have the privilege of appointing one constituent for each assistant door keeper, clerk or stenographer, to serve a term of thirty days.

NEILL IS RENOMINATED.

Washington, Jan. 6.—President Taft today renominated Charles P. Neill to be commissioner of labor.

PARCEL POST RULES.

Suggestion No. 3.

(The Sentinel will each day present a concise explanation of some of the parcel post rules and regulations.)

"When parcels bearing ordinary postage stamps are presented for mailing, the sender shall be required to affix parcel post stamps before the matter is accepted. When a parcel bears ordinary postage stamps, or the postage is otherwise insufficiently prepaid, and the sender cannot be located, the matter shall be treated as unpaid or insufficiently prepaid, marked, 'Held for postage,' and the addressee notified immediately. Such matter shall not be held longer than two weeks, unless the office of address is so remote that the postage could not be received from the addressee within that time. If the required postage is received, parcel post stamps of the value thereof will be affixed to the matter in such a manner as to cover a part of the words, 'Held for postage,' and the parcel dispatched."

LIFE OF DYNAMITE JURY FOREMAN IS THREATENED.

Newcastle, Ind., Jan. 6.—Frank Dare, foreman of the jury which returned a verdict of guilty against the alleged dynamite conspirators, who has received two letters threatening his life, departed today for Florida to spend the winter. His health has been impaired by the worry over the letters and by the long confinement during the trial.

Both of the communications received by Mr. Dare were from Chicago and declared that the jury foreman would "be planted under the sod within three months." The prosecutor is making an investigation.

WORK STARTS ON TARIFF CUT

Hearings Mark Beginning of Democratic Revision Program.

SEEKING A BASIS FOR NEW SCHEDULE

Chemical List is First to Pass Under the Pruning Knife.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Democratic revision of the tariff actually got under way today when the house ways and means committee began hearings which will be the basis of the new tariff bill of the next congress to repeal the Payne-Aldrich law. Today's hearing was on schedule "A" the chemical schedule the committee plans to go down through the list, taking a new schedule every other day until all have been covered.

With the full membership of the committee sitting in the big hall in the house building, the first hearing of a month-long series, looking to the preparations of a law to carry out the democratic party's pledges of an "immediate downward revision" and "tariff

Most of the democratic majority of the present ways and means committee will go into the next congress which is to convene in extra session probably between March 15 and early April. When the tariff hearings are ended democrats of the committee will devote themselves in daily sessions to the formulation of the tariff legislation which they hope to have ready by March 15 if not earlier.

Caucus to Decide It.

The concrete result of their deliberations, the new tariff rates from acids to zinc to the expansion of the free list and so on, will be formally passed upon at a caucus of the representatives of the new house to be called soon after the opening of the extra session. The caucus will determine whether the new tariff legislation shall be in the form of a single measure or in separate bills, scheduled by schedule along the lines of the tariff procedure of the last session, when chemical, wool, cotton, iron and steel and free list bills went through both houses but met presidential veto.

Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee and his associates are inclined to favor the same course as that of the last session. By that procedure it is urged by its advocates, "logrolling" or trading on rates on various articles could be avoided.

The chemical schedule is one of three or four that command the greatest interest, democratic committeemen claim revision along the lines embodied in the chemical bill of last year would save American consumers $17,000,000 by reducing the prices of all chemicals at the same time increasing the revenue to the govern-

The "Come-on" Signal

DURING the noon hour of Friday of last week, while Traffic Officer Shaughnessey was off duty for lunch, his place at Wayne and Calhoun streets, was filled by Officer Nick Petgen. It happened that during the period between 12 and 1 o'clock on that day there was a regular blizzard. The snow fell thick and fast for a while, and the wind blew at a terrific speed. It was in the midst of this condition that the officer found the vehicle traffic quite heavy and he kept his eyes alert to avoid mishaps of any kind.

At one moment, when the east and west traffic had held away and the north and south drivers were given the right of way, Officer Petgen noted a rig approaching at a pretty lively gait from the south, but not fast enough to be considered to exceed the speed limit. It was a light covered delivery wagon to which one horse was attached. The officer gave it the regulation "come-on" signal and it whizzed past and continued on toward Berry street. And then something puzzling happened. People were seen running out from the sidewalk to grab the horse and bring it to a standstill, which was done without much delay.

The rig belonged to the Markey green house. While the driver had stopped at the gas office, the horse, without a driver, started off north on Calhoun street. As it approached Wayne, the officer, whose view was obstructed by the falling snow, gave the horse the "come on" signal. Later, however, others happened to notice that the driver was absent and the rig was brought to a standstill before any damage was done.

Gave it the signal.

SCHOOL TO TEACH WAY TO WIN MEN

Kansas Institution Has 1,000 Happy Young Women Students

WHO WANT TO COOK

Manhattan, Kan., Jan. 6. A course in how to become good wives has been added to the curriculum at the state agricultural college. Nearly 1,000 girls and young women have been enrolled as pupils. Girls reared in luxury to grow old in want have left a tragic lesson.

Teachers in this Kansas institution, who are responsible for the course of cooking being added to the curriculum, think this innovation will eventually be adopted in every school or college in the land where girls are educated.

"It will work much good," said the president of the college. "Many girls have been handicapped at the most crucial period in their lives through ignorance of household work. To rear a daughter without a knowledge of cooking and home care is a great injustice to her."

Hundreds of girls are expected to wed soon after their graduation. They will then have been trained as good cooks, the faculty believes.

One of the requirements of the course is that each division of four girls shall, on an "allowance" of $1 for each person, buy, prepare and serve the food they eat during the entire week.

The meals are served to members of other classes, who pass upon and criticise both food and service.

INSTALLS ITS OFFICERS.

Lawton Wayne Post, G. A. R., Has Had Prosperous Year.

Lawton Wayne post, No. 271, G. A. R., has installed its officers for the coming years as follows: Post commander, Crawford Griswold; senior vice commander, Henry C. McMaken; junior vice commander, William Kirkham; surgeon, Dr. John G. Ogle; quartermaster, William A. Kelsey; officer of the day, Ambrose W. Kintz; chaplain, William B. McMaken; adjutant, George D. Adams; sergeant major, Cornelius Gerin; quartermaster sergeant, Amos R. Walter; officer of the guards, John Goring; sentinel, John Loth;; patriotic instructor, William Killen; delegates to department encampment, H. C. Sayner and Asa Turner; alternates, Stephen Chase, Thomas Ryan and Cyrus Fike.

S. S. Kelker was made chairman of the entertainment committee and the advisory to the Sons of Veterans will act as members of the memorial committee.

The following comrades died during the past year:

Thomas C. Beals, 12th Indiana volunteer infantry; David Binkley, 17th Ohio; Enoch Clark, 152nd Indiana; John F. Crow, 11th Indiana battery; Allan H. Dougall, 88th Indiana volunteer infantry; James C. Peltier, 12th Indiana volunteer infantry; William H. Wortman, 7th Iowa volunteer infantry; William Kelsey, 36th Wisconsin volunteer infantry.

During the year the post made a net gain of eleven members, which entitles it to the department prize flag, offered by the commander.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

Excellent Opportunities Offered by the Government.

Assistant Postmaster William J. Hess announces a number of special civil service examinations to be held at the local federal building during the month. The examinations and the dates upon which they will be given are as follows:

January 20—Lecturer on road economics (female), salary, $1,200; agronomist in wheat investigations, $1,800 to $2,500.

January 22—Photo engraver in the Philippine service, pressfeeder in the printing office of government department, medical interne at government hospital for the insane, laboratory assistant in creamics blue printer, tariff clerk, cadet officer, cadet engineer.

January 22 and 23—Junior chemist in the bureau of mines, engineer for the Indian service, and junior computer for the bureau of mines.

January 27—Alloy chemist in the department of mines of the interior.

February 3—Map printer in the geological survey at Washington, D. C.

LOCAL COMMITTEE FOR STATE CONVENTION OF MASTER PAINTERS.

The committee on arrangements for the fourth annual convention of the Indiana State Association of Master House Painters and Decorators is as follows, reading from left to right: Frank Cornish, Oliver S. Jones, Henry Meyers, Clem Junge, B. C. Henricks, William Pape, jr., Ferd Busse, A. W. Firks, H. M. Miller, Gottlieb Haller, L. A. Schofield, Louis Brunner and John Bowers.

ment. The plan of the committee is to levy low rates of duty upon non-competitive articles produced in this country, especially the chemicals used in the textile industry and chemicals and drugs used in medicine.

The First Witness.

The first witness today was Henry Howard of New York, representing the Manufacturing Chemists' association. He contended that the committee should delegate the whole question of the chemical schedule to a sub-committee for expert investigation. Mr. Howard insisted that the association felt very strongly that no body the size of the ways and means committee could as a whole conduct an investigation so essentially technical. He favored a non-partisian committee or commission.

F. J. Krebs, president of the Krebs Pigment and Chemical company, of Newport, Del., objected to the changes in the tariff as proposed by the last session chemical bill, vetoed. The same position was taken by R. A. McCormick, of Baltimore, who objected to proposed changes in drugs, barks, etc. Louis L. Brigham, of the Brigham Sheet Gelatin company, of Randolph, Vt., asked for relief from the present chemical tariff saying it was not scientifically adjusted. He held up specimens of domestic and foreign gelatin and protested that there was now paid just as much duty on raw material as for the finished product. He contended that that put him on the same basis as the foreign gelatin manufacturer. He thought that about double the present duty on finished gelatin product would be fair in the proposed tariff.

T. F. Schoellkopf, of Buffalo, followed.

Mr. Schoellkopf said the proposed reduction of duty on commercial tar dyes or colors, of which about $7,000,000 were annually brought from 30 to 18½ per cent., would operate unjustly to the American manufacturer. He agreed to open his books to the committee to show the profits of his company.

STATE OFFICERS OF INDIANA MASTER HOUSE-PAINTERS AND DECORATORS, TO HOLD CONVENTION HERE.

Effecutive board—J. D. Martin, Covington; H. L. Loehr, South Bend; G. A. Wilhelm, Indianapolis; Roland Tutt, Crawfordsville; George F. Hauer, Richmond.

The first business session will begin Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the reading of the minutes of the last convention, which will be followed by a meeting of the executive board. The report of the credentials committee will then be read and will be followed by the introduction of resolutions.

List of Speakers.

Some of the state speakers and their subjects are as follows:

G. W. Kevers, Indianapolis, "Bleeding Reds;" Prof. Garner, Indianapolis, "Soya Bean Oil;" Hallie Geyer, Lafayette, "Habits;" J. B. Becker, Richmond, "State and Local Associations;" E. G. McNeal, Muncie, "Mixing Things;" S. H. Hart, Detroit, "Ready Mixed Paint or Paint Ready for Use;" C. A. Wilhelm, Indianapolis, "Workingmen's Compensation Law;" Prof. Park Fuller and J. B. Campbell, Chicago, "Colors, Their Use and Abuse;" member of Fort Wayne association, "Open and Closed Shop."

THE DOCKET WAS DRY.

Uninteresting Drunks and Vags in City Court Today.

Although there were plenty of drunks on the city court docket this morning they were of the plain, uninteresting sort, and many of them, after they had entered their plea of guilty and explained that they were harmless, were released.

John Schrimpsher stated to the court that he had a painful toothache on Saturday night and bought a bottle of whisky to alleviate the pain of said tooth. John evidently got his toothache stopped as while he was going home Saturday night he became so numb that he fell down and was unable to proceed. Judge Mungovan continued his case for a week to give him a taste of jail life. His bond was fixed at $100.

Frank Harvey, charged with vagrancy, drew $5 and costs. Jack Shannon faced a charge of public intoxication, but he had the nerve to tell the court that he hasn't been drunk in the last fifteen years. He was picked up Saturday begging at residences about the city. He was fined $1 and costs and went to jail to serve out the time.

Walter Hamilton, charged with petit larceny, had his case continued until Tuesday morning. The affidavit against Hamilton was filed last February when he was charged with stealing three bushels of coal from the Home Supply company.

Sam Johnson, charged with obtaining goods on false pretense, had his case continued until Dec. 11 and is held under $500 bond.

ROCKEFELLER AT NASSAU.

Oil Man Wanted as Witness Enjoying Breezes of Bahamas.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 6.—William G. Rockefeller, wanted as a witness before the Pujo money trust investigating committee, is a guest at a hotel at Nassau, Bahama islands, according to persons arriving here today from the islands. Statements by steamship officials were to the effect that Mr. Rockefeller sailed from Miami on the steamer Miami last Thursday after arriving here from Palm Beach in the private car of President Parrot, of the Florida East Coast railroad.

Theodore Wentz, cashier at the German-American National bank, has returned from a business trip to New York city.

The regular monthly meeting of the Fort Wayne Retail Merchants' association will be held this evening at the Commercial club. This will be the last meeting before the annual state convention of the retailers, which is to be held here January 21, 22 and 23. Plans for the big meeting will be discussed.

APPROVES ASSESSMENT ROLL.

Cost of Improvement of Lakeside Park Before Park Board.

At the meeting of the board of park commissioners on Saturday afternoon the assessment roll for the remodeling of Lakeside park was approved. The date for the final hearing of this improvement was set for Saturday, Feb. 1, at which time the property owners who are to bear the assessment will be given the chance to state any objection they may have. The expense, $17,495.02, is to be met by the property owners in the district bounded by State street on the north, on the west by St. Joe river, on the south by the Maumee river and on the east by the city limits.

W. E. Brinkman, spokesman for the property owners on St. Joe boulevard, asked the board to take that thoroughfare under its control. A petition to this effect is to be submitted to the board in the near future.

The receiver for the Fort Wayne & Springfield Interurban company asked the permission of the board to construct a line of poles through Foster park. The company is abandoning its power plant at Decatur and wants to connect its wires with those of the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company through the park. The matter was deferred until next Saturday.

The board has obtained permission to use one of the city fire engines to flood the ice in the parks where skating is permitted when the ice not fit. The board of works also sanctioned the use of all of the hydrant water necessary for the purpose.

WESSEL IS RE-APPOINTED.

Local Man to Be Reading Clerk of the House.

John Wessel, jr., who during the recent national campaign served as secretary of the Allen county democratic central committee, has been re-appointed as reading clerk of the house during the coming session of the Indiana legislature. Mr. Wessel occupied that position during the last session, and his work was considered favorable by the representatives.

GOMPERS OUT IN HOT REPLY

when he declared that "our whole social organization seems to be on trial."

As to Judge Anderson.

"Even the judge who tried the case smugly assured of personal irresponsibility," Mr. Gompers said, "fatuously declared that 'the evidence in this case will convince any impartial person that government by injunction is infinitely to be preferred to government by dynamite.'

"The worthy judge had blindly chanced upon one of the causes, but had failed to realize casual relationship. The words to him were simply a conventional epigram—he does not know there is a law of life, just as immutable as the law of gravitation; of attraction and repulsion a law of life which meets tyranny and injustice by resistance. The impatness, aye, the unwarrantable character of this utterance of the judge discloses how far afield outside of the case he went to take another slap at labor."

Defends Federation.

Mr. Gompers defended the American Federation of Labor as a force for betterment of conditions and resented the attacks made upon it since the beginning of the dynamiters' case.

"We have been investigated," he said, "from the first insinuation of the enemies of our movement to get the men "higher up" and because of their directly and indirectly connecting my name with the men supposedly "higher up," I have declared my readiness at any time to submit for examination by any representatives of constituted authority or by a committee of any respectable body of citizens, every document, paper or account, financial or otherwise. I have challenged and now challenge, any of our enemies to show that there has been any unlawful conduct or any connection, direct or remote, with any violence in connection with any labor controversy or otherwise.

"Mr. Frank Morrisson, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, was summoned to appear before the grand jury. He took with him, not only all the financial accounts and transactions of the American Federation of Labor, but his own, and after a thorough scrutiny and investigation, they were returned to him and are now at our office. Not a scintilla of evidence or suspicion of wrong doing could be discovered; not a scintilla existed, or exists."

The federation leader referred to statements made by John Kirby, Jr., president of the National Manufacturers' association, William J. Burns, the detective who caused the arrest of the McNamaras after the Los Angeles Times explosion, Harrison Grey Otis, editor of that paper and others whom he characterized as "enemies" of organized labor, and continued:

Quotes His Enemies.

"You will see that I have quoted the worst enemies of organized labor, my most conspicuous and relentless enemies, men who would, if they could, send me to jail or consign me to the gallows. I have not even referred to the regard, respect, or confidence of my friends, of the men and women who believe in me, my work and my motives. But, pray, will any one point to a single act, aye, to a single utterance, of my worst enemies, of a constructive, liberty loving humanitarian character? Anybody can be a man hunter; anybody can be a negative force; anybody can be a nobody."

Mr. Gompers said he would have the public consider the convicted iron workers "with the understanding mind and the spirit taught by the teacher of old who said 'Let him who is without sin cast the first stone.'

"There are many ready to heap upon the structural iron workers," he declared, "not alone the men adjudged guilty, but every member of their union, condemnation and humiliation; many ready to wrap the robes of saintly justice tightly about them lest contact defile them, ready to withdraw from these men every good and uplifting influence and to cast them out to the mercy of whatever interest might profit by their helplessness."

Attack on Employers.

Launching into his attack upon the employer, whom he declared has persistently fought the Iron Workers' union, Mr. Gompers said that they never had thought of the constructive ability of the workers. He condemned in this connection the National Erectors' association, the National Manufacturers' association and the United States Steel corporation.

"For six years the fight went on," he said. "All of the forces of organized society were used against these men. You may say that these men resorted to forbidden methods of violence and even sacrificed lives. You condemn their methods of fighting as elemental, brutal. Of any of those who are guilty the condemnation is true, but I ask you—were the methods used by the employers less deadly to humanity and freedom? Do you think that one side can play with the forces of tyranny and not lead to a defensive move on the part of the other? Each will protect his own interests—would anybody else do that for him?"

CITY BREVITIES.

H. J. Keenan, of the Anthony hotel, has disposed of his interest in the New Burdick, at Kalamazoo, to a hotel syndicate, operating throughout the middle west. He still owns the Rickman hotel.

Rev. A. C. Wilmore, D. D., of Winchester, Ind., who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Rowe, of West DeWald street, has returned home. Mr. Wilmore was called to Fort Wayne by the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. E. W. Wilmore.

Gertrude Lyons, janitress at the Fort Wayne postoffice, has returned to work after having been confined to her home several days with a severe attack of the grip.

In Westminster abbey a verger had a foreigner arrested for kneeling and praying in the main aisle of the building. "But," said the judge," why do you object to the man's devotional act?" The verger was amazed. "W-why, your honor," he stuttered, "if I d-didn't make an example of this man people would be praying all over the place!"

William Bucher, the first white child born in Leavenworth, Kan., died the other day. The last time he was out was on election day, when he was hauled to the polls and voted a straight democratic ticket.

MANY MOTHERS CLAIM DEAD BOY

Lad Crushed by Motor Truck Wore Lamb's Wool Garment.

LIKE MANY OTHERS

New York, Jan. 6.—The bruised form of a boy enveloped in a crimson lamb's wool coat, which once was white, was dragged from under a front wheel of a six-ton automobile truck loaded with two tons of ink, in front of 54 Chrystie street. The child, while running across the street to his home had slipped and fallen in the path of the heavy vehicle. Death was instant.

In the neighborhood of 54 Chrystie street are a score of families, each having a little member who is the proud possessor of a coat similar to that worn by the boy who was crushed. A dozen women gathered about the body as it lay on the sidewalk. Among those was Mrs. Lio, of 50 Chrystie street. She knelt beside the form, wringing her hands and crying.

"It's Charles, my Charles," she wailed.

Mrs. Lio was pushed aside by an older woman, living in the same address.

"No, no, no!" screamed the newcomer, "it is my own little Minnie—see! There's her little coat." She was Mrs. Polpe.

The two kneeling women were joined by a girl, her hair falling loose on her shoulders.

"Go away," she cried, "leave me alone with my sister—my own little sister—Loretta." She was Mary Firman, seventeen years old, of 48 Chrystie street.

The other two did not go. They knelt, gazing at the body in the crimson coat. The Firman girl became hysterical. Other women came and claimed the body. One was Mrs. Schwab of 50 Chrystie street. The body, she was sure, was that of her daughter Dorothy, four years old. Another was Mrs. Fisher, of the same address.

"My Charles, he's dead!" she cried.

The last woman to claim the body was Mrs. Petro Labresa of 54 Chrystie she said it was her son Petre.

Policeman Redmond began a process of elimination which resulted in the identification of the body. It was Petre Lebresa.

OFFICIALS NOT WORRIED.

Do Not Believe Panther Was Caught In Atlantic Gale.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Naval officials are not worried by reports that the repair ship Panther, sailing from Hampton roads for Guantanamo last Thursday, may have been caught in the gale which swept the Atlantic coast. It is not customary for a repair ship to report between sailing and arrival. The Panther is equipped with wireless and would have been heard from had she been in trouble, they say.

MELTS ICE QUICKLY.

Accidental Blaze Licks Up Three Tons in Five Minutes.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Three tons of ice melted in five minutes today when an ice auto truck caught fire in front of a downtown drug store. William Fessler, the chauffeur, stopped the truck in front of the store and gasoline dripped on the pavement. This was ignited when a man tossed a lighted cigar stub on the liquid.

SAYS PREACHERS ARE TOO ELITE

"Rural Pastors Don't Get Down to Farmer's Level"

SAYS A PROFESSOR

Larned, Kan., Jan. 6.—Something is wrong with the country parson, according to E. L. Holton, professor of rural education and sociology in Kansas Agricultural college, Manhattan. Just what rural pastors lack Prof. Holton explains as efficiency. "They are not efficient," he says, "because they are not sufficiently rustic."

Prof. Holton has received thousands of letters from all parts of the country asking for recommendations of country preachers who can fill the bill. As he holds a position of public service he has for years made a study of rural church needs.

"Rural pastors must be more practical, speaking from a rural standpoint, if they expect to make their sermons such that the average farmer will go to hear," is one of Mr. Holton's precepts. "A country pastor should understand farm problems, be able to talk agriculture in agricultural terms and take an active part in the affairs of rural life. To do these things he must live in the country and work on the farm."

At the instigation of Prof. Holton and other members of the college faculty interested in rural religious affairs, the rural church conference, held at Manhattan recently discussed and adopted the "Manhattan Program of Duties," which sets forth the following modern views of a country parson's requirements:

First—He should influence the church to think in terms of the community instead of the hobbies of so-called "pillars" and creeds.

Second—He should make the church building a society center.

Third—He must clothe the gospel message in the every-day, though sometimes startling, language of the plain people of the twentieth century.

Fourth—He must pacify internal wranglings and discourage community competition between denominations.

Fifth—All but one church in each community of less than 600 must be abolished.

Sixth—He must do actual farm work that he may be more able to mix with his congregation.

Prof. Holton is backed in his views by every member of the faculty interested in his hobby. Regarding the practical benefits to accrue from a reform of present rural religious conditions, he says: "Conditions in rural communities must be changed to make farm life more attractive and turn immigration from cities back to the farm. This is the real solution for the high cost of living, and the country parson can be a great factor, if he will, in making the change."

SAYS HE PRAYS TOO MUCH.

Wife Has to Urge Other Grounds for Divorce.

Stockton, Cal., Jan. 6.—Frequent indulgence in prayer by a pious husband, even if it causes him to neglect his family, does not constitute cruelty in a legal sense, and, therefore, does not warrant a wife in bringing a divorce suit, according to a decision rendered by Superior Judge J. A. Plummer.

"I realize," said the court, with a smile lurking around his mouth, "that prayer may seem cruel to attorneys who don't indulge often."

The case at bar was that of Mrs. Pearl E. Rollins of this city against William A. Rollins of San Mateo. She testified that her spouse had a habit of putting aside the sordid things of secular life and allowing his mind's eye to dwell on things celestial. Happily for the wife, she also alleged failure to provide, and this won the decree.

Mrs. A. R. Tabor, of Crider, Mo., had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sich headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended. Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by all dealers.—Adv.

FIFTH MARRIAGE AT 78.

Bride Takes Her Second Plunge Into Matrimony at Sixty-one.

Walla, Walla, Wash., Jan. 6.—Recording of a marriage certificate revealed that Carrick H. Barnett, aged 78, had made his fifth plunge into matrimony, his partner being Mary C. Rice, aged 61, of Chicago, who was making her second.

The couple could not be reached, but Barnett's son said it was no early romance.

"Just an ordinary wedding," he declared.

Thousands Have Indigestion

Can't Eat, Drink and be Merry and Feel Good the Next Day

Stomachs have a habit of becoming obstinate once in a while; every stomach has a lot of work to perform in digesting the food that is put into it, and when too much labor is urged upon it, it rebels, goes on strike as it were, and is apt to kick up a painful disturbance.

Don't get cranky or despondent when the stomach rebels. Wise people take a couple of MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets and presto; the misery is gone.

Take MI-O-NA for one week and make your tired, out-of-order stomach strong and vigorous, so that it will digest everything you eat.

Then you'll have a keen appetite; will eat better, sleep better. MI-O-NA is a specialist's prescription and guaranteed to banish indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or any acute or chronic upset condition of the stomach, or money back. 50 cents at druggists America over.

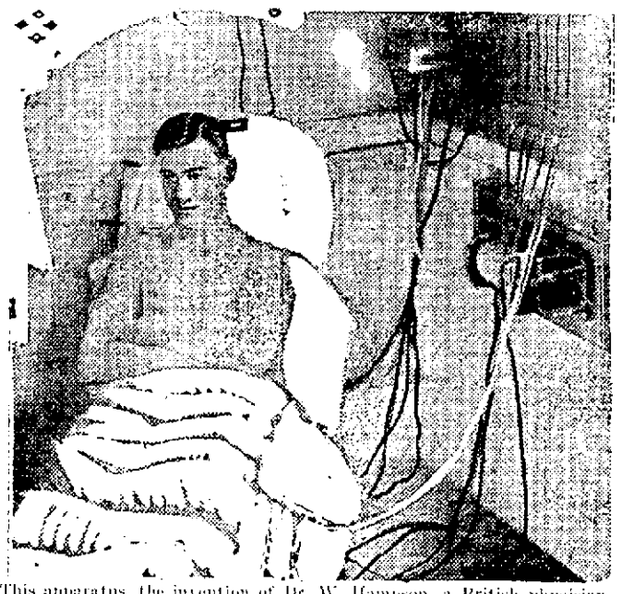
NEW APPARATUS MAKES MUSCLES "BEAT" WHEN HEART IS OVERWORKED.



This apparatus, the invention of Dr. W. Hampson, a British physician, converts groups of muscles of the body into "secondary hearts" by causing them to contract and relax at intervals roughly corresponding to the beats of the heart.

It can be used to steady and slow down over-rapid beating hearts. At the Middlesex hospital, London, where it is being used, remarkable results in reducing rapid pulsation have been achieved, and many lives have undoubtedly been saved.

The grave of General Booth in Abbey Park cemetery, London, has already become a shrine. As many as fifty visitors to that grave alone have been counted in one day. They come from all parts of the world.

SOUTHERNER IS NO DUELIST.

Policewoman Takes Oath and is Given Authority.

Spartanburg, S. C., Jan. 6.—"Have you fought a duel since 1881?" was one of the questions Miss Anna Rupp had to answer when she was sworn in as special policewoman by Mayor O. L. Johnson.

Miss Rupp made oath she had not engaged in a duel as principal, second or otherwise since 1881, and would not participate in dueling.

Thereupon she was given authority to carry a billet and revolver and make arrests.

Start is Encouraging

The Sentinel's weekly business resume of Fort Wayne, printed on Saturday, reflected a most gratifying start of the new year in local commercial, financial and industrial circles, that offers much in support of the prediction that the new year will bring to the city its greatest measure of advancement and progress. Save in the retail lines, the final weeks of an old year are invariably characterized by some measure of retrenchment in the preparation of plans for the new season, yet this condition was apparent only to a very small degree in the final days of 1912. The new year is marked by a general tone of business hopefulness and an active preparation for taking care of the tremendous volume that seems certain to come. To an unusual degree for this season of the year, local factories are working full time, there is an active demand for money, preparations for spring business are well under way, and a general tone of hopeful, confident optimism pervades the ranks of employers and employes alike. There is manifest a splendid confidence in Fort Wayne, a pride in her prospects and a determination to do things in a large way. All this will have much bearing upon what the new year actually brings to the city, and it is invaluable as the moving spirit that actuates trade and business generally. With no semblance of the erratic "boom," but with a steady, substantial growth that is never broken or halted, Fort Wayne is making a most auspicious start in what promises to be by all odds the greatest and best year in her history.

In view of Terre Haute's past performance regarding the state school funds, the legislature will be justified in moving slowly in accepting any so-called "reform" measures emanating from that source. The proposition to base the distribution upon the average daily attendance in the public schools instead upon the enumeration is manifestly unfair to a city like Fort Wayne, where a large proportion of children attend parochial schools, but whose parents pay the same taxes in support of the public schools as do the parents of children who attend them. To deprive any city of its just share of the public school revenues in any such fashion as this is so manifestly unfair that it is difficult to believe it will be given any sort of serious consideration when it comes before the law-makers.

District Attorney Miller is to be commended for his declaration that while insisting upon adequate protection of the government's interests, he will not interpose unnecessary obstacles to the bonds for the convicted dynamiters who had lesser parts in the conspiracy shown by the government in the famous case. It developed in the closing days of the trial that there were among the accused men a number whose participation in it had been but nominal in character and largely unwilling. If the leaders are going to be able to furnish bonds and get their liberty, the lesser lights are most certainly entitled to equal leniency.

It ought to be a genuine pleasure for Fort Wayne citizens generally to co-operate with the master painters and the retail merchants in entertaining the two forthcoming state conventions of those organizations. The two gatherings will bring hundreds of visitors to Fort Wayne, and we want each one of them to leave the city with a personal knowledge of what a splendid, prosperous and progressive city Fort Wayne really is.

PROBABLY TYPICAL.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

Everybody has run across one of those symposiums on "What would you do if you got a million?" The answers generally have sounded hollow and insincere, as if written for publication only, rather than a genuine expression of the individual's inclination. The practical demonstration of "What I would do if I got ten millions" by the daughter of the once famous bonanza king is a much more interesting human document and more probably typical of what a great many would do with wealth if they had it.

Coming into possession the other day of the ten millions left by her father, her first thoughts found expression in the purchase of $300,000 worth of diamonds, a private railroad car costing $40,000, a yacht, gowns, furs and jewels, the aggregate amounting, it is reported, to $750,000. Interviewed at San Francisco on her return from her three-quarters of a million shopping tour she is quoted as saying: "I spend money—lots of money—for anything, everything, all the time." Awaiting her she found hundreds of begging letters, all in the same plea, "You are so rich; give us some of your money." Her comment was: "My diamond collection would go 'kerplunk' right now if I tried to grant all their requests."

While none but the begging letter-writers will find fault with her decision not to be victimized, it is worth nothing that her refusal was based as wholly on its person effect on her pleasure as the spending of that three-quarters of a million. Her idea of celebrating the New Year was on the same line: "I think I will dress me up in a long white gown, with a train, with plenty of ermine trimmings and things to match. Then I will put on a few of these diamonds, loop a string or two of pearls around my neck and go forth and see the sights. I might take in a theater or two. Then I'll have dinner in some nice place where the orchestra isn't too tump-te-umpty, and after that—well, I suppose I'll join in the merry throng!"

Not the slightest notion of the responsibilities of wealth. Not a glimmering of using it for any higher purpose or pleasure, personal or public, than the sensual gratification of the moment. Yet how many who envy her those ten millions would have a nobler purpose?

IMPOSING WESTERN GARB ON CHINA.

(New York World.)

By decree of the Chinese government the new year is to be marked among the Chinese by the abandonment of the old styles of clothing and the adoption of the fashions of Europe and America. Women are to put aside trousers for skirts, men are to substitute sack coats for the blouse, both are to wear western shoes. Men are, moreover, to wear western hats, but nothing on this score is commended for the women. Perhaps some word of warning reached the government as to what women's hats are like in this part of the world and caused it to hesitate.

Measures of this kind appear to be inseparable from revolutions. When society turns upside down everything goes with it. Yet it is a pity it should be so. The style of garment that a race makes for itself is sure to be much more suited to its needs and to its climate than any imported from a foreign fashion center. It is, moreover, much more likely to be picturesque as well as comfortable, and to be therefore a thing of beauty in a world that civilization is rapidly reducing to a common level of ugliness. These advantages were possessed by the Chinese garb. The working apparel was simple and comfortable. The festal attire was rich and graceful. The change will not benefit China. It would be a better revolution if every people would fashion its own clothing.

PARCEL POST IN THE COST OF LIVING.

(New York World.)

As a novelty the new parcel post is affording much enjoyment to the American people in trial shipments of fruit, eggs, beefsteaks and what not. As a settled means of reducing the cost of living through the elimination of the middleman its worth remains to be proved.

Secretary Wilson thinks it will cheapen the farmer's cost of marketing without lowering the cost to consumers. But when the farmer as a direct retail seller has taken upon himself the dealer's risks and the costs of making up small packages for shipment, his gain may disappear.

Packages of a dozen eggs now coming into the city from within the first zone bear postage up to 12 cents, or over 40 per cent on the present farm price of 32 cents, and there is the cost of the carton and packing to be added. But thirty dozen eggs in one crate from the same farm can come in by express for around $1.25, or only about four cents a dozen.

No more need be said to show that the parcel post is not to settle the high-cost-of-living problem. It will prove a great convenience in many ways. But the law of greater economy in transporting by wholesale remains unrepealed.

MANNERS.

(Kansas City Star.)

Good manners have just brought a St. Louis boy a promise of a legacy from an aged woman of the neighborhood where he lived. That is merely an extreme case of the favorable impression good manners always make.

Young boys often get the idea that politeness isn't manly, and that it is evidence of smartness to be rude. They do not know enough of life to understand that if a boor is successful it is in spite of his boorishness. Manners are an important development of civilization. They are evidence that a person comprehends the world he lives in. They are really of far more importance in a school curriculum than geography.

Cosmetics Wont Stop Pimples and Sores

Bad Complexions Are More Than "Skin Deep"—It's Your Blood That Needs Attention—Take Laxipods and Watch Results.

An ugly, blotched complexion, covered with pimples and sores can now be readily remedied by anyone with perfect ease. These eruptions of the skin are caused by poor blood circulation and that is in 9 times out of 10 caused by constipation and torpid liver. Your doctor will tell you of the way constipation poisons the blood and hinders circulation. Don't take calomel or injurious drugs. Just get a box of Laxipods of your druggist and take according to directions on the box. Hundreds of people have written to us thanking us for the wonderful transformation that Laxipods have worked on their systems.

Keep Laxipods in the medicine chest and use them whenever you need a laxative or cathartic.

SCIENTISTS ARE STUDYING A DOG

Canine Obeys Orders Called Through Door or Whispered

AT JOHNS HOPKINS

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 6.—Jasper, a cross between an English bulldog and an Italian greyhound, declared by his owner, "Dixie" Taylor, to be the most intelligent dog in the world, appeared before a jury consisting of six professors and two students at the Johns Hopkins university and gave a demonstration of his intellectual equipment.

Prof. John B. Watson, head of the experimental psychology department in the university and a widely known writer on psychological subjects, was there, and with him were Prof. R. W. Wood, professor of physics; Prof. Herbert Spencer Jennings, professor of biology; Professor Knight Dunlap, professor of biology, and Drs. C. Bassett and Leonard K. Hirschberg.

A few words from his master and the dog, after mounting a table for a look out of a window, ran down a hall around the corner and closed the door. Taylor gave a number of orders through a closed door and they were all obeyed. A rubber ball, a pair of spectacles, a whisk broom, a hat and other articles were placed in a row on the floor and Jasper was instructed to select one of them. He made only one or two errors.

"Whisper your commands to him," suggested Dr. Dunlap, so Taylor breathed a few words into the animal's ear, whereup Jasper romped over to a lot of objects and picked up the correct one—a ball. Tests tried out in the open succeeded equally as well as those in the laboratory. Jasper ran across the street and stood up against a wall, and when it was suggested in a casual way that he run a block and crawl into an automobile there, the dog went to the place designated, but the machine was too high for him to jump into.

Mrs. Rose Naynon, who appeared here in a trained bird act at the Temple a short time ago, has practically recovered from an operation for appendicitis performed at the Hope hospital. Her husband, Philip Naynon, left the city yesterday to fill engagements.

CAN CHECK BABY AT CHURCH DOOR

Mrs. Russell Sage and Miss Helen Gould Assist Nursery.

IN WEALTHY PARISH

New York, Jan. 6.—Not so many babies are born in Fifth avenue homes as would seem to necessitate the establishment of a nursery as an adjunct of a church attended by residents of that fashionable thoroughfare, and so the communicants of the Collegiate Reformed Church of St. Nicholas, at Forty-eighth street, were astonished to read the following notice in the weekly calendar:

"We have arranged a nursery for the children who find it too wearisome to attend preaching service in addition to the Sunday school. Miss Clara Young, one of our faithful Sunday school teachers and an experienced kindergartner, is in charge.

"Parents can leave their little ones with Miss Young and feel confident that they are well taken care of."

The parishioners include Mrs. Russell Sage and Miss Helen Gould, and it was learned that they, as well as several other prominent and wealthy members of the congregation, were back of the project. The Rev. Malcolm James McLeod, who has been pastor of the church for two years, explained that the number of children in the parish during that time has increased surprisingly.

Parents were permitted to "check" their babies for the first time and the nursery opened with twelve children in the care of Miss Young. There is no doubt that every one of them enjoyed the way Miss Young entertained them. She played the piano and sang to her young charges and told them tales of giants and fairies.

"We think church is so much fun!" the children confided to their entertainer.

This is the second novel step taken by the church during Mr. McLeod's pastorate. Last winter the women of the parish opened a dairy luncheon room for working girls of the neighborhood and have maintained it ever since. It is in West Forty-seventh street between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

BOTH PHYSICIANS MADE SAME MISTAKE

Place—Hospital in Pueblo, Colo.
Case—Chronic Bright's Disease of fifteen years' development.
Prognosis — Recovery impossible and patient (a Mr. Gaden) was so advised and that he could remain or go home.
On arrival at Center, Colo., could not sit up alone in bed. A local physician was called. He, too, said he could not recover and prescribed for his heart.
It did not look like the patient could live a week when a new agent was added to the treatment.
In ten days patient was sitting up; in twenty could walk outdoors. He made a slow but steady recovery. He weighed 190 lbs at last advices.
These facts were given us by his wife, Mrs. Mary Gaden, of Center, Col.
Both physicians were mistaken as to the possibilities.
The new agent employed as above was Fulton's Renal Compound. It does not conflict with the physicians' prescriptions. But it does change the prognosis from despair to hope in many cases.
Over nine out of ten of the dead from kidney trouble show Bright's Disease. This is a census fact that kidney-troubled people ought to know.
The D. & N. Pharmacy is local agent. For literature write John J. Fulton Co., San Francisco.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

WILL REQUIRE $50,000 MORE

New Courthouse of DeKalb County Will Cost More Than the Appropriation.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 6.—It now develops that it will require $50,000 more than the $250,000 originally appropriated by the county commissioners to complete the new courthouse, the work on which is now rapidly approaching a finished state. This will make the building, when completed, cost $300,000. This $50,000 extra cost the county council will be asked to sanction and an appropriation made for it. It seems that this state of facts was known at the outset, but the fear was that if the appropriation was put at the $300,000 figures that it would be defeated. Now that the work has proceeded so far there is but little doubt that the additional appropriation will be made, if absolutely necessary.

THE GIRLS AT BLUFFTON.

Marion Official Couldn't Get Them to Work in His Factory.

Bluffton, Jan. 6.—J. H. Deakin, superintendent of the Macbeath-Evans Glass company, of Marion, made a trip to Bluffton for the purpose of employing girls to work in his factory, but by the time of his departure for home he was of the opinion that all girls in Bluffton who wanted to work were well employed and receiving good wages.

Mr. Deakin said that he was finding it hard to secure girls to work in the glass factory and he thought that he might induce a number of families here to move to Marion. After a short investigation, however, he found the working girls here were receiving a higher wage than the glass factory was paying with more desirable work.

15-INCH GUNS FOR GERMANY.

New Weapons Weigh 101 Tons and Are Sixty-Two Feet Long.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—A fresh and important departure in the competition between the nations to obtain the most formidable warships and the most powerful guns has been made by the German admiralty. Fifteen-inch guns are being mounted in the ships which Germany laid down last year. These are enormous weapons of terrific power, weighing 101 tons and measuring sixty-two feet in length. Moreover, fourteen-inch guns have been mounted in the German battle ships of the Kaiser class, which have hitherto been supposed to be armed only with twelve-inch guns.

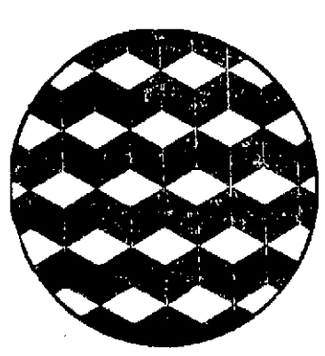
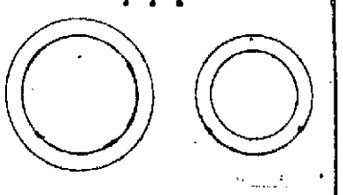
YOUR EYES LIE TO YOU!—DON'T BELIEVE IT?—WELL, JUST GLIMPSE AT THE PICTURES HEREWITH.

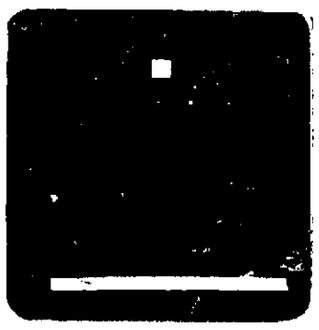


A diagram that changes while you look at it. The white diamonds seem to be either the tops or the bottoms of the cubes, depending on how your eye acts.

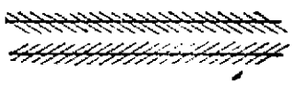
A bird that enters his cage as you bring the paper close to your eyes. A card held vertically between bird and cage may help some if the songster proves obstinate.



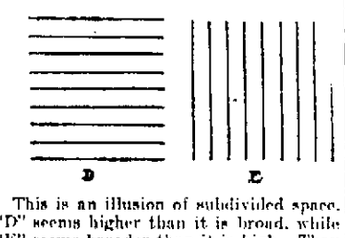
The inner circle on the left and the outer circle on the right are exactly the same size, but they don't look it!



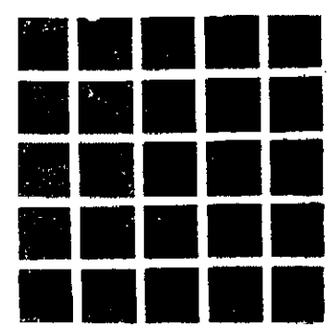
A white line that flickers and finally disappears when the little square is gazed at steadily.



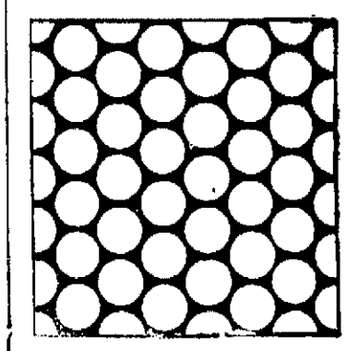
Two illusions in one: The long lines appear further apart at one end than the other, yet they are exactly parallel. The small diagonal lines which cross them appear to jog ahead as they cross, but they do not. The illusion is caused by slightly filling up the acute angles made by the intersections.



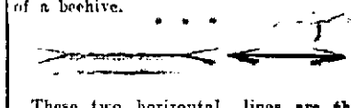
This is an illusion of subdivided space. "D" seems higher than it is broad, while "E" seems broader than it is high. They are really squares, exactly alike.



An effect of contrast—white lines that seem darker where they cross each other.



An effect of irridation: Circles which, seen at a distance, look like the hexagons of a beehive.



These two horizontal lines are the same length. The position of the small lines at each end makes all the difference.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Dunkelberg will begin this evening the social events connected with the annual conference of traveling men and other representatives of the Bowser manufactory held here early in each year. The entertainment tonight will be a reception that is to be given for the visitors and their wives and there will be upwards of two hundred guests attending. Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Bowser will receive with Mr. and Mrs. Dunkelberg and the local officers of the works will also be in the receiving line. They are Messrs. Allen Bowser, A. Z. Polhamus, S. B. Bechtel and H. J. Grosvenor. In the dining room Mrs. A. Z. Polhamus and Mrs. A. A. Bowser will be in charge and in the other rooms will be Mrs. S. B. Bechtel, Mrs. Harry Bowser and Mrs. Grosvenor. The house is beautifully decorated with pink roses and branches of the California pepper plant and southern smilax. A number of ladies, whose husbands are also connected with the manufactory, who will assist in the dining room will be Mrs. Leland Johnson, Mrs. George A. Townsend, jr., Mrs. R. L. Walker and Mrs. William Birch.

Mrs. W. F. Greater gave a very pretty thimble party on Saturday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Charles Porter, who will leave in a day or two for her new home in Ohio, and Mrs. Adam LaMar, of Chicago, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. James A. Graham. Visiting and sewing with a contest passed the early part of the time until the hostess invited her guests to the dining room, where an especially elegant supper was served them. The holiday greens and colors formed the decoration.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Eberbach returned today from a visit in Washington, D. C., with relatives.

James Smith returned to Gary yesterday after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. James Smith, of West Berry street.

The Social Aid club will meet with Mrs. McCarthy, of 319 West Williams street, on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Georgiana Diehl, of Huffman street, has returned from a ten days' visit with friends in Toledo, Ohio.

Miss Jessie Goodwin returned to Indianapolis yesterday after a visit with her sister, Mrs. Eric Crull.

Miss Louise Lehman has returned from a visit in Dayton, Ohio, with relatives.

Kenneth Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Noble, returned today to Taft school, Watertown, Conn.

The Cheerful Aid society will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Kring, 2509 South Harrison street.

Miss Florence Klingenberg has returned to her studies at the University of Michigan after spending the holidays here with her parents.

The appointed meeting for today of the Saturday club has been postponed until a week later. Mrs. H. B. Safe will then be the hostess.

There will be a meeting of the East End Embroidery club on Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. George Tibbets, 1201 East Pontiac street.

C. H. Terry, of Dallas, Texas, who spent the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Terry, of Pontiac street, has returned south.

Mrs. Walter Smoot, who had been visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. Martz, for several weeks, returned to Pittsburg.

Miss Mabel Carter has returned to Providence, R. I., after spending the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carter, of East Creighton avenue.

Mrs. E. J. Fisher and Miss Evelyn Fisher accompanied Miss Margaret Fisher to Washington today, where she will enter Fairmont seminary.

Mrs. Edith Andrews has returned from a visit in Grand Rapids and is staying at the Portland while her home, which was partially burned during her absence, is being repaired.

Mrs. Albert Schroeder has returned to Grand Rapids after spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. W. Schoemann, of East Jefferson street.

Miss Olive Doud has returned to Chicago to continue her voice studies and was accompanied by Miss Lottie Smith, of the same city, who has been visting here during the holidays.

Eben Lane, Ewing Bond, James Barrett, Maurice Lehman, Melvin Beaber, Clarence Rich, David Vesey, Louis Crosby, Don O'Rourke, all returned to their studies at the University of Michigan today.

A change in the place of meeting for the Book Reviewers' club tomorrow afternoon has been made. Mrs. Eric Crull will be the hostess and Mrs. H. L. Askew has taken the date announced for Mrs. Crull. Mrs. J. C. Heller has the reading for tomorrow.

Robert Burns, Frank Hogan and Andrew Moynihan have returned to the University of Notre Dame, and Michael McMullen to St. Benedick college, Atchison, Kan., to continue their studies, after spending the holiday vacation here with relatives.

Among numerous small parties given in honor of Miss Catherine Franke, of Detroit, who is visiting Miss Esther Centlivre, was a pretty card party on Saturday afternoon, for which Miss Catherine Golden, of West Wayne street, was the hostess. A delicious supper was served after the game.

Friends in this city of Miss Cora Fletcher, of Minneapolis, Minn., will be interested in knowing of her marriage to Jacob Henry Maurer, of Boise, Idaho, which took place on Christmas day at the home of the bride. Miss Fletcher, now Mrs. Maurer, visited in this city with her aunt, Mrs. J. H. Barr, of East Suttenfield street, last summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pidgeon will leave tomorrow for Redonda Beach, Cal., to make that place their home, to the regret of their many friends here. Mr. Pidgeon will represent a local manufactory in that vicinity and will be joined later by his brother, Charles H. Pidgeon, who is connected with the same business firm.

A number of young ladies left today for eastern schools to resume their studies. They were Misses Maribel Olds, who goes to Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Mary Evans, to Troy, N. Y.; Miss Helen Magee, to Washington, and Jane Meriwether and Margaret Runyan, to Bethlehem, Pa. The Misses Sites and Miss Dorothy Alden returned to Ann Arbor, where the Misses Sites are students at the University of Michigan.

Miss Gertrude Concannon, who is visiting Mrs. Otto Bruggemann, and who is an accomplished pianiste, will give a recital on Saturday afternoon in Elks' hall. The receipts will be donated to some charitable cause. Tickets can be obtained from Mrs. Bruggeman, Mrs. Ferd Urbahns or at the door the afternoon of the concert. The concert is not an invitation affair, but anyone desiring to attend can secure a ticket for fifty cents.

Mrs. Joseph Storm, of Broadway, gave a dinner party on Friday for relatives, at which covers were laid for twenty-two. There were present Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Paul, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Baade, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Lepper, Mr. and Mrs. John Landenberger, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Landenberger, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Paul, of Lake George; Mrs. Will Paul, Mrs. Charlotte Kern, Miss Elizabeth Paul, George Orthuh. A delightful time was enjoyed by the entire company.

Miss Ida Meyer of St. Louis, who had been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Meyer, of South Wayne avenue, returned there last evening. During her visit Miss Meyer was the honor guest at a number of small parties given by friends and relatives here. Mrs. Will Paul gave a thimble party on Thursday afternoon, Miss Ellen Doyle one on Friday and Miss Luella Traub one on Friday evening. There were other parties earlier in her visit that added to Miss Meyer's pleasure during her visit.

Sieber—Johnson.

Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Sieber are now at home at the Hamilton house, West Berry street, until their home at 125 East Leith street is completed. Mrs. Sieber was formerly Miss Bertha Johnson, of Lafayette, and her marriage to Dr. Sieber took place on December 31. She comes from a well known family of Lafayette. Dr. Sieber is a dentist, who has been located here for some time and is doing well in his profession.

Skirt of Heavy, Mannish Worsted With Waist of Dark Red Chiffon.

This is the kind of a dress that the girl who used to wear shirt waists is now wearing and very natty it is.

The skirt is of heavy, mannish worsted — a kind of gray mixture. It is cut peculiarly in a way that draws around the figure at the feet. At one side there is a pleat or tuck, running down the entire length of the skirt from hip to foot. From the front around to the other side there is a gored panel put on with large buttons. The waist is of dark red chiffon cloth over heavy white lace. Across the back there is a dark blue velvet lodar fastened at the shoulders with tiny buttons to match those on the skirt, and there is a little piping of the same velvet each side of the lace under sleeves that show beneath the chiffon. One original thing about this costume is that the fronts of the kimono waist are cut long enough to tie in a little bow at the top of the high waisted skirt in front, at one side at which is placed one of those little bunches of English field flowers that are omnipresent just now.

The hat worn with this costume is of dark blue velvet with long gray French feathers.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"The Common Law."

There can be no question concerning the deep seated interest in the attraction at the Majestic theater, "The Common Law," the authorized dramatization of Robert W. Chambers' famously sensational work of fiction, which in book form has already topped the million and a quarter mark and continues to fascinate with its unconventional story about the marriage relation.

In presenting Mr. Chambers' story in play form, all the essential elements of dramatic power have been utilized in the direction of offering such scenes and situations that are sure to rivet attention and enthuse the audience and scientifically, as well as from an acting viewpoint, "The Common Law" is said to be an offering well worth while to theatergoers who enjoy something in the line of real solid dramatic entertainment.

The story, breathing of the Bohemianism of artist life, grips with it genuine heart interest. The willingness of Valerie West, the artist's model, to give herself without marriage to Lewis Neville, the artist, to avoid spoiling his career and his social standing, is made to point a moral and adorn a tale. Great strength of character is revealed by Neville, who, deeply in love with his model, refuses to accept her sacrifice. The play will come to the Majestic on Thursday for three days with a matinee Saturday.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Kibble and Martin's world's greatest production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will appear at the Majestic on Wednesday with a matinee.

Kibble and Martin have successfully solved the problem of combining the old and the new "Uncle Tom's Cabin" into a big spectacular play that leaves out nothing worth retaining of either the straight method or the circus method. All the worthy features of the old landmarks are retained, while the thread of the story has been cleverly reconstructed, making it more coherent; this with the introduction of a host of high-class specialties thoroughly in keeping with the piece goes far toward forming an evening's entertainment. It will be a real loss to miss witnessing. Over fifty people are with the company, and two Pullman palace cars, each seventy feet in length, are used to transport this mammoth aggregation from city to city.

HOMEY HINTS

HOMEY HINTS.

Cleans a Handbag.

The handbag or satchel, of undressed kid, when soiled by usage, need not be turned over to the professional cleaner. The secret of restoration is a piece of sandpaper rubbed over the surface. A very fine grade of sandpaper is required. When this is used with care the effect is magical, and no injury to the material accrues. Many kinds of leathers without polished surfaces for example, suede, undressed and ooze calfskin—can be cleaned thus.

Lamp Glasses.

To clean lamp glasses hold them over a jug of boiling water until well steamed, then polish with a dry duster. It is far less trouble than washing and the glasses very rarely break.

Saves Chipping.

When the linoleum or floor cloth has been washed and thoroughly dried, make a little starch in a pint basin with boiling water and rub lightly over with a clean cloth. It will dry very brightly, without any further rubbing or polishing, and has the advantage of being glossy without being slippery.

Keeps Eggs.

To preserve eggs, fill a wooden box with ordinary salt, smear each egg over with olive oil, and place it in the salt with the pointed end downward. Eggs treated in this manner will keep fresh for some time.

Sprinkle Sardines.

When a box of sardines is opened it should be drained of all oil possible and then the little fish turned out and sprinkled with lemon juice. They should be drained again before serving. The lemon will cut the remaining oil and make the sardines more palatable.

A practical overall apron has the sleeves reaching to the waist, and is cut slightly square at the neck, fastening at the back. Many people are having these in a light make of silk or wool to slip over a good dress when housekeeping and to save the trouble of too many changes of attire.

GEORGE ADE NOT SERIOUSLY HURT

Humorist Feels No Bad Effects of Tumble on Slippery Sidewalk.

BRIEF STATE NOTES

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 6. George Ade, the playwright and humorist, who fell on a slippery sidewalk yesterday afternoon and for a time was thought to be badly injured, was able to be out today. Mr. Ade in falling received a blow on the back of his head which stunned him and he was carried into a drug store. He was later able to go to the home of Judge Henry H. Vinton, with whom he was visiting. Mr. Ade said he felt no effects from the fall today.

FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO DIE.

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 6. In an attempt to kill himself here yesterday, Sumner Lee, a negro, formerly an inmate of an insane asylum, poured kerosene around the floor of his home and dragged red-hot coals from a stove on to the saturated wood. He then stabbed himself in the neck and beat himself over the head with the stove shaker. His mother attempted to save him, but failing, called the fire and police departments, who rescued Sumner and put out the fire.

GIVES TOBACCO CREDIT.

Laporte, Ind., Jan. 6. Edward McCloskey, of Porter county, who has just celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary, is firmly of the opinion that his longevity is due to constant use of tobacco. McCloskey, who is a native of Ireland, came to the United States at the outbreak of the civil war to enlist in the union army, but his age precluded service. He is making his home with his sister, not many years his junior.

GAS TANK EXPLODES.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., Jan. 6. While trying to refill a gas tank for his automobile Fred Rironimous, a local mechanic, was so severely injured that he is not expected to live. A large tank from which he was filling the smaller exploded, demolishing the foundation of the tank, windows and floors where the explosion occurred. The injured man was taken to Evansville and placed in a hospital. His son, who was with him at the time, escaped serious injury due to the fact that he was behind his father.

WILL DIE FROM FALL.

Columbus, Ind., Jan. 6. Mrs. Levi Zeigler, 67 years old, fell on the street here yesterday, broke her hip and is in so critical a condition from the injury and shock that her physicians give out no hope for her recovery. There were a number of minor injuries from falls on the ice.

AGED ODD FELLOW DIES.

LOVE AND EXTRAVAGANCE.

The poets frequently assure us that "love is enough" for perfect happiness, without the additional inducements of money and all that money means, and we believe them, hoping that the exceptions we meet are only of the sort that abundantly prove the rule. Such an exception there was of late, in a pathetic story that found its way into the papers—the story of a young man not badly off, but not extremely wealthy, and a woman sincerely in love with him but afflicted with expensive habits. What the wiseacres expected happened. The spending outran the income available, without defeating the love. Finally, since spending of money became impossible, and love without it, in spite of the poets, was evidently not "enough," the two committed suicide and escaped from their bills together.

Habits Stronger.

Love is an emotion, a passion; spending money is a habit. Our story proves perhaps that habits are, in the long run, stronger than emotions. You ask from the poet's point of view: "Could not she for the time being have desisted and have lived contentedly with him, if not on crusts in a cottage, at least quietly, without furs, jewels and the rest?" Ask, just as well: "Could not she have changed her face, her gestures, her instincts, because she was in love with him?"

The spending habit is an instinct, or, if you like it, a mania that often has no connection with the love of luxury and of the things you spend upon. What satisfies the instinct is not nearly so much the possession of this or that, but the actual process of buying of "getting rid" of the money, as the illuminating phrase puts it, expressing the loose gesture whereby the spendthrift "throws away" from him.

Interest Gone.

We observe, indeed, that confirmed shoppers and buyers and spenders scarcely glance at the thing they buy, once it is sent home! The interest then has gone out of it. Theirs, they might claim is no mere avarice, no such covetousness as leads the luxury lover to insist upon the best of everything. Their spending is merely a sport, a sort of exercise which grips them and fascinates, as golf might. Delightful people with extravagant tastes there are, who cannot pass a shop.

Some men give up golf when they're in love—only a very few. The rest merely play with a wilder and possibly more inaccurate energy, while between the strokes they discuss "her" instead of the "approach." Love but intensifies their habitual pleasures.

It has the same effect upon extravagance. That fine old game goes on as it always did on her part—she must "get rid" of the money. And he—how can he withstand her slightest desire? Only, we know that, if he is no millionaire, but perhaps a clerk in a bank or a moderately salaried young man, the bank account gives way and despair settles over them, and the insufficiency of love in competition with spending money is displayed in their death together.

Perhaps a romance of this sort does not always end so disastrously, but it leads one to question, "Is love enough?"

SEWING HELPS.

Cheap handkerchiefs for school children can be made out of sheer lawn or India linon dresses.

Some of the most exquisite modern point lace is made in the Vienna schools by trained peasant labor.

Crocheted bed spreads are the fashion again. One of the prettiest patterns is formed of blocks crocheted together and may be made of carpet warp or a coarse white twisted crochet cotton.

When sewing buttons on, if a narrow piece of tape is threaded through the button and a small hole pierced through the article and the tape drawn through and the ends of the tape stitched down flat on the wrong side, the button will be found to last as long as the article.

Cheap thread and sewing silk are dangerous economies, and it is better to use such for basting and coarse hand sewing and save the best for machine sewing. Breaking thread or thread that knots is maddening, and silk that fades and breaks after it is sewed on the goods wastes one's time and ruins one's temper.

EXPECT TO GUARD HAWAIIAN BIRDS

Scientists Will Exterminate Rabbits and Start Vegetation.

ON LAYSAN ISLAND

Honolulu, Jan. 6.—With shotguns and growing trees as their most delicate instruments for scientific research, four experts for the department of agricultude landed from the transport Thomas to transship to the revenue cutter Thetis for a voyage of observation and exploration among the bird islands to the westward of Hawaii. The main object of their trip is to make of the island of Laysan a bird reserve.

To exterminate the rabbits on Laysan will be the first undertaking of the scientists—hence the shotguns. Reports from previous expeditions have all been to the effect that unless the rabbits could be removed from the island no vegetation would be left to provide food for the many rare land birds that have been seen on Laysan.

The rabbits are tame and it is not much sport to chase them. On the other hand, they attacked one man—an Iowa professor, who was over on the island in 1911—while he was asleep. A certain rare species of warm water seal also will be sought by the men of science.

The most delicate task of the scientists will be to identify the birds on the island and classify them. This will not be easy at all, particularly as there is a strong resemblance between many of the different kinds of birds that really belong to different classifications.

To replace the vegetation the rabbits have destroyed the party is taking along with it trees and plants in all lengths and sizes, which the men purpose to replant and to watch over until they are able to grow for themselves. As the party will be on the island about two months, these plants and trees will have a good start.

Commodore G. R. Salisbury, retired, is in charge of the party. George Willet, reservation warden, whose knowledge of birds is exceptionally extensive, is another member of the party. W. S. Wallace and A. M. Bailey are the others.

Governor Frear and Secretary Mott-Smith probably will accompany the scientists, but they will remain only a few weeks.

HAS A REAL "WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA"

Finds One Woman Was Mother of Best Folks in the Land.

WORK OF PROFESSOR

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 6.—Dr. David Starr Jordan, of Stanford university, is preparing a bombshell, in the shape of a little book, to blast a hole in the world's opinion of itself. The book will be the latest dictum of science on "Who's really Who in America?"

Equipped with tomes and charts and aided by the most expert genealogist on the Pacific coast, Dr. Jordan has traced one thousand American families, representing several millions of us, back through our ancestry.

The scientist has had at his disposal a chart for one hundred pedigrees of many prominent San Franciscans prepared for the California Genealogical society by its corresponding secretary, Miss Sarah Louise Kimball. Boutwell Dunlap, recording secretary of the society, has taken an active interest in the work of preparing the chart.

Dr. Jordan's Findings.

As material for his book, Dr. Jordan has reached these findings:

First—At least half the citizens of this country of English ancestry are descendants of one "scrubwoman" and descendants of one "scrubwoman" and dismembers of one colossal family.

2. Isabel De Vermandois, daughter of a crusader, wife of the duke of Warren, living in the twelfth century, is the common progenitor of ten teeming millions whom Dr. Jordan stamps as the "fittest" of the English speaking race.

3. John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan belong to this remarkable family.

4. Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Morgan have ancestral lines which also run back to Sir Francis Drake.

5. Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, the two Harrison's, Cleveland and Roosevelt are shown to be definitely related.

6. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritis of Harvard, and Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia; the two Timothy Dwights and Dr. Woolsey of Yale, and Dr. Jordan himself happen to fall into a college president trust, due to their common ancestor.

7. Practically any family which can trace its line back to Isabelle de Vermandois is mentally and physically sound, and its progeny stand a more than usual chance to inherit the earth.

Advance in Eugenics.

8. The mating of Mother Isabella's progeny is a step toward the ideal of eugenics, which is to apply the principles of scientific animal breeding or plant selection, such as practiced by Luther Burban, to the human race.

9. True love with the initiative of the individuals tempered by an understanding of eugenics, is far and away a better method of bringing about this selective ideal than a resort to state regulation of parental interference.

10. Luther Burbank's own line has not yet been shown to run back to mother Isabelle, and the greatest living exponent of applied eugenics may himself not be included in Dr. Jordan's list of the "Fittest."

Dr. Jordan discussed his researches and his aims, sitting near an open wood fire within sound of the Carmel surf.

"Isabelle's Fine Character."

"We selected Isabelle De Vermandois as a common ancestor to whom we would trace as many American descendants of English families as possible. Isabelle is known to have been a woman of sound mental, moral and physical characteristics, and of a strain so virile that it has lasted in her progeny down through the centuries. That, by the way, is nature's way of purifying the human current. The progeny of the feeble-minded die out, like withered branches of a tree, and the sound limbs spread on and branch out.

"Isabella was a remarkable woman, and I have studied her life a great deal. She was the daughter of Hugh Magnus, a famous crusader of the twelfth century. The Plantagenet blood, of which she was, has spread itself throughout the English race and is singularly virile.

"Fortunately, that is a matter we do not have to worry about very much. None of your grandparents or mine, stretching back through the centuries as far back as you care to go, died in infancy or were unproductive. The proof is that we are here.

"So this selective process of nature eliminates the unfit, and in the long run only those whose parents were fit to have virile progeny will themselves have virile descendents. But in lopping off the unfit there is a great deal of pain and cost that might be avoided."

VILLAGE TOO SLOW FOR BRIDE.

Husband Asks Divorce from College Girl, Charging Desertion.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 6.—Cherry Valley, a suburb of Rockford, failed to impress Mrs. Lois Agnes Clinite, raised in Champaing, and attuned to the spirit that characterizes college girls, when she came to the village as a bride. This was brought out when a petition of Ray G. Clinite, her husband, for divorce on ground of desertion was heard. Clinites declared his wife refused to accept a place in the society set of the village, and closed the door of her home to callers. She also made him quit his place as principal of the college school, he testified. Judge Frost refused a decree.

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefited by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

NOVEL OPERATION ON HEAD.

Part of Scalp Taken Off, Shaved and Sewed on Again.

Philadelphia, Jan. 6. Thomas Dougherty, of 3125 Ludlow street, fell down stairs and literally tore a large section of scalp from his head. Dougherty was alone in the house at the time and crawled to the front door, when he attracted the attention of several small boys, who notified Policeman Donnelly, of the twenty-first district, who sent the man to the University hospital.

When he arrived there his scalp was hanging by a small tissue at the base of the skull. Dr. Strode removed the scalp, placed it on a piece of marble and shaved the hair from it. He then placed the scalp on the man's head and sewed it in place.

During the operation Dougherty sat and talked with the doctor.

GRAFTS PIG SKIN ON MAN.

Ohio Surgeon Uses Three Square Feet of Cuticle.

Middletown, O., Jan. 6.—Three square feet of pig skin was grafted on the chest and right shoulder of Clyde Rich, 20, in an effort to save his life.

Rich was severely burned by electricity in an explosion in New York city four months ago. He has been in a number of hospitals and his recovery has been declared impossible several times.

The operation was performed by Dr. Harry Silver at his home here, and it is thought to have been successful.

Matches imported from Sweden in the first six months of 1912 weighed 35,000,000 pounds.

Silk Merchants of Tien-tsin, China, have learned a lesson from the looting of their shops during the revolution. The entrance to each shop now is narrow and the door made very heavy and plated with iron. The small street windows are protected by iron bars.

SAM LEEVER HAS DONE BEST WORK

Grand Old Goshen Pitcher Was One of the Great Hurlers.

HELPED WIN PENNANT

Pittsburg, Jan. 6.—Old Sam Leever is about done in baseball. Yes, he did pitch a few games out in the Ohio league association last year, but the Latrobe circle flinger was totally unnerved. He has heard the great call and is hardly expected to do much pitching next season.

But wasn't he a wonder back a few years? Remember that wonderful pair of twirlers who kept the Pittsburg club on the map for so many years? "Deacon" Phillippi and "Sewcumsaver" Sam Leever? Phillippi managed to pitch a few games for the outlaw leagues in the Smoky city last spring, where he worked without much success.

There isn't much akin between teaching school and pitching ball, is there? Yet Leever was a regularly ordained school teacher up in Indiana long before he took up with the national pastime. It is said that he used to have his biggest boys try to hit his curves and fast ones during the recess hours. Then, one day the biggest boy, who was not the best hitter, couldn't find one of "Old Goshen's" slippery ones, and the teacher quit his books for the old Athletics in the Atlantic league. That was back in 1897, and he was even then 25 years of age.

Then Leever went to the Richmond club of the same league, and did so well that a delegation of big league scouts waited on him, offering him fancy terms to join teams. He decided to go to Pittsburg. His trial was sufficient to establish his class. He battled Louisville eleven long innings to a tie at 2 to 2. In Richmond he had averaged but a single free ticket to a game, and he kept up this great exhibition of control while with the pirates.

Beginning in 1900 he did his best work along until 1908 when his arm began to feel the strain. He used to listen to Bill Hart and Billy Rhines, two old veterans of the hillock, and his school room habits forced him to remember all they taught him. He was simply going to school to them instead of running the class himself. He used to do that every winter, though.

Just as soon as the season ended Sam Leever would dust out to Indiana and start in all over again with his boys. He was clean minded and strong, an admirable teacher. And in the evenings he would sit and think of all the lessons he had been given during the summer by Hart and Rhines until at last he was their equal in skill.

In 1903, the year the Pirates copped the pennant, only to lose the series for the world's title to the Boston Americans, Leever's work was wonderful. He landed every one of his last thirteen games, coming through with three whitewashes in a row. He was the best pitcher in the National league in 1902 and 1905.

But he couldn't pitch forever, you know. He had started late, anyway, being 25 years old when he joined the Athletics in 1897. He began to slow up. He didn't pitch many games in the last two years in Pittsburg, but Barney Dreyfus kept him on long as he wanted to. Finally the old school teacher said he was ready for the minors. That's where he is now, in Minneapolis, with every prospect of quitting the game and returning to his class room.

But he was a great old Roman while in his prime.

PFIRMAN GETS A NEW JOB.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 6.—Charles "Cy" Pfirman, local boy who umpired in the Central league last season, has signed to officiate in the Central association next year. The terms of the contract are better than agreed to last campaign by the Terre Haute Indiector handler. Pfirman was reserved by the Central league for the 1913 chase, but he secured his freedom through a personal appeal to President Louie Hellbronner. "Cy" will report about the first of April.

OPTION ON TOTS GIVEN BY OWNER

Terre Haute Man Will Try to Organize a Stock Company.

STARTS ON THE WORK

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 6.—It is highly possible that when the Central league directors meet here on Monday of next week that there will find the Terre Haute club in the hands of a new stock company and A. W. Wagner will have passed as a director of the organization.

The Charles Horn deal was never very pleasing to fandom and did not appeal to business men as it was a purely speculative move and had nothing in it calculated to encourage the sport and there was little regret when it fell through.

Today Capt. O. M. Watts, a local business man, who is a good patron of the game and a hustling organizer, obtained an option on the club and its holdings and began a campaign with a view of organizing enough stock subscriptions to put over a deal. He has met with plenty of encouragement and hopes to be at the head of a new association when the meeting is called to order. Mr. Watts said today:

"I firmly believe there are enough public spirited men in Terre Haute to swing the deal. I want the club to have as big a capital as possible, so that we can start off the season with something to work on. Mr. Wagner will take as much stock as any one else, I understand, and I see no reason why the company plan should not be a big success.

"After the stock end of the matter has been taken care of I intend to begin a campaign by which sufficient money can be secured to run the ball club next season. The plan of selling season tickets appeals to me greatly, and if the stockholders give their consent I will canvass the city in an effort to dispose of say 500 season tickets. The season tickets will not only be good for the fan purchasing the pasteboard, but to any friend to whom he desires to loan his ticket. In that way any business man who has a ticket can send a friend, customer, clerk, etc., out to the games at his option. Supposing a business man had a party of friends drop in from a nearby city, and they wanted to take in the ball game. All he would have to do would be to tear out as many tickets as were friends in the party. That's a good plan, now isn't it? I think the idea is a good one, and everybody I have talked to agrees with me in the matter. Two good men could dispose of a large number of season tickets along the lines I have mapped out, I believe, and that is my plan by which a working fund could be secured for the ball club."

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire in this manner to thank Wm. O'Rourke, jr., Henry Roesener and Paul Dannecker for saving our son from drowning at Swinney park on Saturday.
MR. AND MRS. FRED HUHN.

AMOS RUSIE UNDER ARREST.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 6.—Amos Rusie, one time star twirler of the New York Giants, was arrested on complaint of his wife, charged with threatening to kill her. It is alleged that the former pitcher drove his wife, an invalid, into the street and then forced their little daughter to leave the house. Rusie, now employed as a common laborer, was gatekeeper at the Seattle ball park last summer.

THERE WERE BUT FOUR NO-HIT GAMES IN 2,464 AND THESE FOUR MEN PITCHED THEM.

When a major league playing season ends, the eight clubs comprising the league have played 1,232 games, theoretically sometimes they forget to play a game or two at the fag end when the games make no difference in the standing of the clubs involved.

Thus, the two major league organizations play each year 2,464 games. Each team plays 154 games, half at home and half on the road.

And out of this number of exhibitions of the national sport in the major organizations in 1912 but four were "no hit" contests, only four pitchers defeated their opponents without giving a hit.

Of the quartet one was a veteran of eleven years, two were recruits and the fourth had been playing big time just short long enough for the pin feathers to begin sprouting.

Three of the "no hit" games were played in the American league and one in the older organization.

The veteran pitcher was George Mullin, who for the first time since he joined Detroit, pitched a no hit game July 4 against St. Louis. Six men reached first, five walking and one on an error. Detroit won, 7-0.

On Aug. 20 Carl Cashion, of the Washington club, pitched a six-inning no hit game against Cleveland, winning 2-0.

Earl Hamilton, the sensational young left-hander of the St. Louis Browns, held Detroit hitless, his team winning 5-1.

Jeff Tesreau pitched the only no hit game in the National, against that slugging crew, the Phillies, Sept. 6, the Giants winning 3-0.

NEE HAS A CANDIDATE.

Dayton Manager Signs Man for the Short Field Position.

Dayton, O., Jan. 6.—When it comes down to lining up his infield for the coming season, Johnny Nee will have a hole cut out for him which will no doubt cause the manager of the Vets to do a little deep thinking before making a definite selection. As to who will play short, there were three candidates for the job up until Saturday, when President Rendels received a letter from Nee announcing that he had signed a player who will try out for the short field job in the spring. The new man in the fold is George Simms, and he comes highly recommended to Nee by Jack O'Connor, the former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and well known baseball man. Simms' home is in Washington, D. C., and he hails from the ranks of the collegians having been regular on the university nine of the east.

BILL JAMES TO PORTLAND.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 6.—Bill James, the elongated right-handed pitcher, acquired by the Cleveland American league club from the Toledo team of the American association, has been released to the Portland, Ore., team of the Pacific coast league, it was Charles Somers announced today.

FOUR TEAMS ARE IN THE RUNNING

Good Race is on in the First Brunswick Bowling League.

CENTLIVRES AT TOP

KID M'COY KIDS MAHER IN FIGHT

Manages to Pull Victory When He Had His Man Frothing.

WON WITH HIS TALK

A lot of qualities go to the make-up of the successful pugilist, and not the least of them is the art of "kidding." To be able to remain calm and cool despite all verbal provocations to anger and at the same time to make remarks that excite an opponent to frenzy, spells success in the ring, other things being fairly equal.

This was illustrated just thirteen years ago, Jan. 1, 1900, in the famous battle between "Kid" McCoy and big Peter Maher at Coney Island. The Irishman was a good fighter—good enough to whip any of the white heavyweights of today—and if he had kept his temper might have been the victor. "Kid" McCoy was the champion sneerer of the ring, and could think of more mean and scallious things to say than any other fighter that ever lived.

In the second round the Hoosier began to unlimber his verbal artillery. "You big stiff," he remarked, "the newspapers say you have been doing the b-by act, crying for sympathy because your wife is sick. Before I get through with you, you'll have a real reason to blubber for sympathy. Take that oo poo' little cwy-baby!"

Such insulting language would be enough to get the goat of almost any man, and Peter fairly frothed at the mouth. The Irishman's wife had been very ill, and had reached a critical point at the time of the fight, and this added fuel to the flames of Peter's wrath. He waded in, regardless, which was exactly what the clever "Kid" had been playing for. In the fifth round Maher was smashed to a pulp, and the Hoosier was declared the victor. After the battle the "Kid" apologized for his remarks, saying that they were only a matter of business," and Maher was better than ever, realizing how McCoy had made a fool of him.

HOGAN SELECTED FOR ZANESVILLE

Will Manage the Club in the Interstate Next Season.

IS FAVORITE THERE

Zanesville, O., Jan. 6.—Marty Hogan will move to Zanesville in a short time and take up the task of building up the ball club that he will manage next season in the Interstate league. He was selected over a number of applicants and the appointment was made as a recognition of his great work in pulling the local club out of the rut in the Central league toward the close of last season and as an indication that Hogan is the best suited for the position of all the applicants for the management of the Athletics. The directors are confident that their action will meet with the complete approval of local fandom.

Hogan will attend the meeting, go into business temporarily here, and is looking for propositions along that line.

He announced to the directors after receiving his appointment that he plans a reconstruction of the local team and that he will endeavor to put a club into the field at the opening of the Interstate league season that will be young and speedy and peppery. He expects to present a new outfield at Athletic park on opening day, and possibly a new face or two on the infield. He will go out at once for a new pitching staff, but is fairly satisfied with the prospects of his catching department.

The club now has under reserve the following players: Outfielders Meissner, Hillinger and Grogan; infielders, Swartling, Prysock, Manda, Crowder and Sheehan; pitchers, Stremmel and Noble; catchers, Huston and Tragressor. Four recruits, including a pitcher, a shortstop, a catcher and an outfielder, have also been lined up for trial. It is almost certain that Hillinger and Grogan will not be retained by the club.

TURNERS AND SAINTS.

The Turner Juniors have a game booked at their hall this evening with St. Mary's Seconds. Play will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

THE DEATHS.

MACBENNETT.

Francis MacBennett, aged seventy-one years, a pioneer contractor, died at noon Sunday at his home, 2110 Lafayette street after a brief illness due to pneumonia.

Mr. MacBennett was born in county Monahan, Ireland, August 8, 1841, and came to America forty-eight years ago locating in Fort Wayne. He immediately entered the contracting business, in which he continued until ten years ago when he retired. Forty-two years ago he married Mary MacMullen of county Antrim, Ireland, and to this union nine children were born. Four preceded the father in death. Surviving besides the widow he leaves five children—Mary C., of Fort Wayne; William, J., of Newburn, N. C.; James H., of Fort Wayne; Rosalie A., of Fort Wayne and Sister Thresa Cecelia of the Order of Providence. There is also one sister, Mrs. Rose Meyer, of Sheboygan, Wis.

Mr. MacBennett was a member of St. Patrick's Catholic church, and for a number of years served as trustee in the congegation. He was also a member of the Men's sodality, and of the Catholic Knights of America.

Mr. and Mrs. MacBennett were married by the Rev. Father Brammer in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception and their marriage was the first solemnized in the cathedral with a mass.

Funeral services Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock from the residence, and at 9 o'clock from St. Patrick's Catholic church.

DISLER.

Samuel Disler, aged seventy-six years, died at 1 o'clock Sunday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Tonkel, in Cedar Creek township. His death followed an illness of only two hours. He had not been in good health for several weeks, but his death was entirely unsuspected.

He was born in Starke county, O., in 1837, and in 1859 was married to Catherine Shirley. The wife and three children preceded him in death. Surviving he leaves, Mrs. John Metcalf, of Fort Wayne; Mrs. George Tonkel, of Robinson Chapel; Mrs. Frank Kryder and William Disler near Cedarville. Two brothers and two sisters also survive—Henry and Pierce Disler, Mrs. Michael Hosler and Mrs. Phoebe Martin.

Funeral services Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the residence, and at 11 o'clock from the M. E. church at Cedarville. Interment at the Leo cemetery.

NEUROTH.

Lewis Neuroth, aged sixty-five years, died at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the family home, 1201 Stophlet street, following an illness of one year's duration. He had been bedfast for the last two weeks.

Mr. Neuroth was born in Germany and came to this country with his parents when eight years of age, locating in Chicago. He moved to Fort Wayne fifty-five years ago, and took employment in the Wabash shops. For many years he had been foreman of one of the shop departments. Surviving he leaves the widow, one son, Charles, and two grandchildren.

One sister, Mary Neuroth, resides at Bucyrus, O. Funeral services Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence, Rev. Edward Montgomery officiating. Interment at Lindenwood.

JOHNSON.

Mary D. Johnson, died Saturday night at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. D. Stapleford, 625 West Creighton avenue, late Saturday night. Death was due to senility.

Private funeral services were held at 10:30 o'clock this morning from the residence. Interment was made at Lindenwood.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Brandon—Funeral services for Mrs. Minnie Brandon Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the residence of Mrs. William Law, 1115 Cass street, and at 2 o'clock from the Trinity M. E. church, Rev. T. M. Hill, officiating. Interment at Lindenwood.

A sister, Mrs. J. D. Carl, of this city, also survives.

Lauferty—Funeral services for Leah Lauferty, who died Thursday at Toledo, O., were held at 10 o'clock this morning from the Klaehn & Melching undertaking parlors, Rabbi Lovitch officiating. Interment at Lindenwood.

LLOYD JONES IS PROMOTED

Is Assistant Engineer of Motive Power of Pennsy Central System.

GETTING READY FOR BAD WEATHER

Pennsylvania Increasing Its List of Firemen—Shop and Rail.

The men connected with the motive power department of the Pennsylvania in this city were pleased this morning by the news that Lloyd R. Jones, of Columbus, O., had been appointed assistant engineer of motive power of the Central system, with headquarters at Toledo. He was formerly assistant to P. F. Smith, jr., now superintendent of motive power of the Central system, when that gentleman was master mechanic at Columbus. While serving in that capacity Mr. Jones made frequent visits to Fort Wayne and acquired considerable acquaintance among the men employed in the motive power and mechanical departments. The office he will occupy at Toledo is similar to that occupied by O. C. Wright, of this city, on the Northwest system. Two other changes are announced by the Pennsylvania today. A. J. County, assistant to the vice-president, was appointed special assistant to the president, and O. J. DeRousse, chief clerk of the office of the president, was appointed general assistant. Ivy L. Lee, formerly in charge of the publicity work of the company and who has been in Europe for the past three years representing an American firm of private bankers, has been appointed executive assistant.

OFF AT DERAIL.

The engine pulling westbound Nickel Plate passenger train No. 2 was derailed at South Whitley Saturday afternoon, causing a blockade of several hours on the road. The Stony Island wreck crew and outfit was called to the scene, but it was 7:30 o'clock before the train was able to proceed and it then had to make a detour. The accident was at the Vandalia crossing and is alleged to have been due to the operator suddenly throwing the derail against the engineer after he had a clear signal and was running at a pretty good speed.

SUBMITTED TO AMPUTATION.

John Slusarzas Listens to Advice of Surgeons.

The heroic effort to save a foot for John Slusarzas, the laborer who was badly injured in the Pennsylvania shop yards a week ago, has failed, as the surgeon feared it would, and at their advice the injured man, who had previously refused to have the member amputated, submitted to the ordeal Saturday evening. The operation was performed by Drs. C. B. Stemen and A. H. Macbeth and the patient passed through it in good form. A. Sakalsky, the other man injured in the same accident, was more fortunate and will completely recover. These two men were loading a lot of car wheels on axles on a car to be taken to the east shops when a switch engine bumped against the cars and started the wheels to roll westward and down the skids, knocking down and injuring the two men on their way. Dr. Stemen advised the amputation of the foot of Slusarzas, but until Saturday he refused to submit.

GANG FOREMAN HURT.

Heavy Tool Drops on Head of Dave Goodall.

A most peculiar and painful accident happened to Dave Goodall, gang foreman at the Pennsylvania boiler shop, last Saturday. He was assisting in shaping some boiler pieces and was standing on the end of one of them when it entered between the massive rollers. When Mr. Goodall stepped off the heavy piece of boiler sheet, the piece flew up and threw a heavy tool in the air. In its descent this tool struck and injured Mr. Goodall on the head and shoulder.

WILL INSTALL BLOCK SYSTEM.

The Lake Erie and Western has in contemplation the installation of a block signal system between Kokomo and Indianapolis next summer. General Supt. Bonner, Chief Engineer Atwood and Roadmaster Parkhurst made a trip over the line last week to examine the situation and determine upon the needs in this line. The Pennsylvania lines use the Lake Erie tracks between the points named and there are many trains of the road.

WILL BUILD TWENTY CARS.

The local shops of the Pennsylvania will build ten gondola and ten box cars for the Ohio River and Western road, a branch of the Penn-sylvania system extending from Zanesville to Bellaire, O., a distance of 112 miles. Master Carbuilder J. A. Graham, of this city, is in Zanesville today on business connected with the order for these twenty cars. The Ohio River and Western road is a narrow gauge line.

TAKING ON MORE FIREMEN.

The Pennsylvania road foreman of engines is strengthening his forces somewhat and getting ready for winter weather, when tonnage of trains has to be reduced and more trains put on the road. For the past two or three weeks ten or twelve men have been hired as firemen and more may be accepted if the right kind apply.

NO AGREEMENT YET.

The conferences of the Wabash motive power officials and the representatives of the Federated Crafts, which have been in progress for two weeks, were not completed last week and the Fort Wayne men who represent the four crafts in locomotive work will return to Springfield Tuesday.

CARLTON HATCH OUT.

Carlton Hatch, of the transformer department of the Fort Wayne Electric works, who accidently shot himself while cleaning a gun last December, will soon resume his duties in the shops. He was out yesterday morning for a walk, the first time since the accident.

WRECK FOREMAN LOSES TOE.

As a result of an infected wound on the second toe of his left foot, S. C. Park, Pennsylvania wreck foreman, the toe was amputated by Dr. Stemen Saturday night. Mr. Park was injured December 22, when a car wheel rolled upon his foot.

PATROLMAN INJURED IN FALL.

U. H. Strasser, Pennsylvania patrolman, came home from Gary, Ind., yesterday suffering from a sprained ankle, the result of a fall Saturday night. He will be off duty a week or more. Patrolman Strasser, while residing in Fort Wayne, has been stationed at Gary some time.

FROM RAILROAD TO ARMY.

Harry Stephens has resigned a position as brakeman on the Nickel Plate and has entered the United States army. He will be sent to Vancouver. Stephens served one term in the United States army.

YARD ENGINEER HURT.

H. S. Current, yard engineer on the Pennsylvania, sustained injuries last night that will put him out of commission several days, though they are not serious. The particulars could not be learned.

Will Go to Altoona.

A. S. Courtney and W. B. Madara, assistant foremen at the Pennsylvania machine shop, will go to Altoona the latter part of the week on business for the company. They will probably be there several days.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

George Witting, a boilermakers' helper resigned his position this morning.

Machinist Trace Bauer is absent from his work in the Wabash shops today on account of sickness.

Machinist L. V. Casso, who was taken three weeks, reported for duty at the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

Richard Stolte, a draftsman at the Bass master mechanic's office, is sick and off duty today.

Machinist L. V. Casso, whho was taker ,resigned his position this morning. duty at the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

A large pump from the Ashley water station of the Wabash was brought here and taken into the shop for general repairs yesterday.

Machinist Fred Ropa resumed his duties at the Wabash shops this morning. He had been sick and was in the hospital at Peru over a month.

William Doehrmeyer, a Pennsylvania fireman, is out after a severe attack of typhoid fever, which kept him within doors for six weeks.

A. S. Poe, of the Baltimore and Ohio, was in the city today to inspect 400 car wheels at the Bass Foundry and Machine works.

H. W. G. Heine, Pennsylvania boilermaker, spent the greater portion of last week at Valparaiso, where he relieved the foreman of the boiler department of the round house several days.

J. E. Hoog, E. C. Murray, R. F. Campbell, J. Broderick, E. Norris, V. S. Pollock, J. Wagner and M. J. Reilly, Pennsylvania engineers, are off duty on account of sickness.

E. F. Needham who had been here over Sunday on business and for a visit with relatives, left at noon for his home in Springfield.

Jacob Walker, who had a finger injured last week, reported for duty at the machine shop of the Fort Wayne Electric works this morning.

D. J. Boldt, yard conductor on the Pennsylvania, is off duty suffering from a painful sprain of his right ankle, which he received when he fell in getting off a train.

R. Bradley, inspector of fuel service for the Wabash, with headquarters at Springfield, Ill., was in the city Saturday in conference with Master Mechanic G. W. Smith.

Nickel Plate division, No. 513, Grand International Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, will give a pedro party and a dance Tuesday evening at the B. L. E. hall on West Main street.

Elmer Carr has been employed as a fireman at the Pennsylvania power plant. He takes the place of P. Miner, who had an arm broken Saturday when he slipped as he was resting a part of the stoker in the boiler room.

Wabash Continental limited, No. 1, yesterday carried a special car for the accommodation of students who were returning to the colleges at St. Louis. Twenty of the students were from this city and vicinity and they had been home spending the holidays.

W. C. Buehler, of the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, sustained a sprained hip in some manner and is unable to work. Henry Roembke, of the same shop, is off duty on account of the death of a friend. George Henschen, D. L. Lloyd and Charles Ross, of the boiler shop, are sick and off duty.

Marion Dove, a house carpenter who took a position at the Pennsylvania erecting shop as a helper during the off season for his trade, has resigned to work at house building again. Charles Ross, also a helper at the erecting shop, resigned to return to his former home in New York.

Diphtheria caused the death of the daughter of Floyd M. Bennett last Saturday and the only remaining child of the family, a little boy, is very ill with the disease. With their mother, the children had gone to Gary to visit their grandmother and were taken sick while there. Mr. Bennett is traveling auditor for the Lake Erie and Western, resides in Lima and makes frequent trips to Fort Wayne, being well known in L. E. & W. and Lake Shore circles here.

The Wabash pipe and tin shop will be practically closed tomorrow afternoon on account of the funeral of the late Louis Nuroth, which will be held at 2:30 o'clock from the family home on Stophlet and College streets. P. A. Thompson, chief clerk in the master mechanic's office, Foreman W. A. Bell, of the machine shop, and Foreman T. C. Steger, of the pipe and tin shop, will represent the shops as pall bearers at the funeral. Mr. Neuroth commenced work at the local Wabash shops in 1872 and with the exception of two years, when he was with the Grand Trunk, he was on the pay rolls up to the time of the illness which proved fatal Saturday night.

Keep your liver and bowels active and you feel bully for months.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oils or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.—Adv.

Humane Officer.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 31, 1912.

Irrigation is of special value when the rivers of the country contain salts. This is the case, for instance, in South Africa, where in many parts the salt pans are a frequent feature. In other cases the salt has gradually collected in depressions guarded by trees and rushes, and in the course of ages has often reached a great quantity. Much salt of this kind would be carried over the land by irrigation, much to its improvement.

NOTHING EQUALS S.S.S. FOR OLD SORES

Nothing equals S. S. S. as a cure for Old Sores because nothing equals it as a blood purifier. The source and supply of every chronic sore is impure blood; the circulation is infected with germs and morbid accumulations which are being constantly deposited into the open place. This causes ulceration and inflammation of the flesh tissues and produces a condition upon which salves, washes, lotions, etc., can have no curative effects. The blood must be purified of all infectious matter before the circulation can nourish the flesh tissues and stimulate them to the healthy condition necessary to heal the sore. S. S. S. heals old sores by going down to the fountain-head of the trouble and driving out the germs and morbid matters which are keeping the ulcer open. Then as new, rich blood is carried to the place, the healing begins, all discharge ceases, the inflammation leaves, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the ulcer is well. You are not wasting time when you use S. S. S., but you are giving yourself the benefit of the very best treatment for old sores. Book on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice free. S. S. S. is sold at drug stores.

THE NATURAL SOLUTION

By ALTA BRUNT SEMBOWER

(Copyrighted 1911 by Harper & Bros.)

GRAHAM, at a sound behind him, turned away from the flower-decked altar. He had been deep in half-wistful contemplation of the Easter lilies, which, made only the more vividly white by the glow from the stained windows, seemed to breathe a cool austerity as well as a fragrance into the comfortable elegance of the congregation-room. He had been making the most, in the way of thought, of his moment alone after the sermon. He had not many; and now at this purloined moment there was interruption. With a habit of patience, which he had been long in acquiring, Graham turned toward the sound.

There was a soft swish of the vestry door, the quick coming of feet down the aisle, and, in the time of turning round, he was face to face with a young girl who looked at him with a restrained eagerness, and whose gloved hand was outstretched toward his. Graham took the hand with a little wonder. He remembered the face: this was the girl who, of late, had sat in Mrs. Gresham's pew. He had met her somewhere—the remembrance of that was vague. But he had noted the face from the pulpit—in one of those moments of lucid survey between sentences—because it was so freshly young, and yet was lacking in the usual ennui of young faces before him. He had felt a twinge of satisfaction at the intensity which his eye had caught in this girl's face. He was glad to see this intensity at closer range: what kind of interest did it indicate?—one might judge of one's intellectual appeal by such a standard. This went swiftly and coolly through his head in the instant during which he held the girl's small hand. The hand seemed to quiver and vibrate in his, but its clasp was firm, and full of initiative.

"I wanted to say something to you that I have thought of"—said the girl, breaking off with a kind of soft breathlessness. "My aunt—Mrs. Gresham—is in the vestry waiting. She has promised me three minutes. I think she thinks I want to make a kind of confession. But—" As she paused there appeared in her forehead a small tangled thread of trouble and embarrassment, as if she doubted, now that she had come, her courage and her excuse. Then suddenly, with a little flash of bravery, she went on, with the same quaint abruptness. "I know that you worry," she said. "Why do you? What is there in the world to make so much trouble and question? And in spite of such things as you say to us! Everybody says—they talk of you as of things that set them thinking—that it is all beautiful, and brilliant, and sure—and, as my uncle says, terribly convincing." There was a little ring of impatience in the girl's voice. "And yet I know, I am sure, no matter what you may say, even—you do doubt and question, and are worried," she said a little lower.

Graham stood motionless throughout this long speech. It was one of the tabs put upon him by a brilliant woman of his church that, in the matter of talk, he could "begin in the middle of things." Here was a challenge to his power; yet for an instant he did not seem ready. As he did open his lips to speak the girl again forestalled him. For the first time she looked a little frightened; her face grew crimson.

"Please, if you like—don't say a word," she said, quickly. "I mean, not a word of yourself. I didn't see, for a minute, how curious I seem—do I not? I only wondered—about the thing. Aunt says I am fatally simple. I live in a village—she says it is written in my face. And when I wanted to know, I asked. It is a question—a something that underlies your sermons. And I meant—I simply could not understand them, until I knew what it is that makes them what they are."

"That beclouds them," said Graham, faintly smiling.

The girl shook her head. "No, they are clear. Everybody—men and women, all get something, and are satisfied. Not merely men and women, but men like Mr. Lyons and women like Mrs. Ashby—brilliant, thoughtful. And yet I dare to feel this—this something." She smiled, in rueful confession of her audacity.

Her intensity was infectious. Graham suddenly took a turn into the aisle, hands in his pockets. "Did you see old Godfrey Lyons?" he asked, abruptly, as if he had introduced the subject. "How he listened, how he liked it?"

The girl replied with sympathetic brightness. "Oh, he liked it. He leaned forward once and fairly smiled at you."

Graham's eyes, keen and bright, came back to the girl suddenly—"They all get something, you say. They don't see division in me. I'm not afraid of that—but is the division there? And if a man sees two roads, can he choose, without being a hypocrite, not to travel only one of them. The figure's absurd, of course, but you see. And sooner or later, anyway, won't it show?"

The girl looked a little bewildered. "But must there not be ethics?" she asked.

With apparently a sudden idea he came at her personally. "What is it that you want, that you miss?" His intensity gave the words a kind of harshness.

She met it simply. "I don't miss anything. I feel that it is all there, all the good is there, in what you say. If you can believe me, after what you have said, I think that is dimly what I feel. It is not mixed, not blended into one thing, somehow. I know it is fanciful. Am I too presumptuous?"

Graham stared at her unsmilingly. "You are a wizard. I boast that no one sees the conflict in me, and you, it seems, have been watching it from afar. Or—perhaps you are an æsthetic. It seems to be beauty—harmony—that you want. You discover a discord in me."

Her eyes flashed. She took up his illustration eagerly. "But if there is discord in you, then it is not because the chords are wrong, but because they are not played together."

"Of course," he said, rather coldly, "I do not grant, as you seem to, without question, that the appeal of my sermons should be simple. May it not be that complexity fits them to appeal to this one and that? Society is complex, full of this and that doctrine, yet it is ready to be reached at varying angles, at various exposed points."

The young girl unconsciously put out her hand and steadied herself against a pew. She looked very clear-eyed and obstinate all at once. "Society may be complex," she said, "but life is simple."

Graham looked more than astonished; he looked angry. Then by a sudden whimsical turn he became gentle; the girl's eyes, clear and even wistful, were not provoking. "Perhaps you have special vision," he said. "For us who live in dim light there are questions. You will grant it to us to study them out."

The girl's eyes were bright, suggesting tears of vexation. But she spoke steadily. "Now you are laughing at me—I deserve it!" In support of her sincerity she went on, without anger. "No one has vision, I know; every one has questions. Only it seems to be so straight and simple, to feel for the answer." She was laboring along somewhat. Graham looked unconvinced. She tried to find an illustration. "I bought a gold candlestick, once, for my mother's room. I wanted it for her—it was lovely. I brought it in and she admired it. Then I put it on the shelf, and we looked at it, and suddenly mother laughed, and both together we said, 'It won't do.'" She shook her head, not satisfied with the example. But she let it stand. "Anyway, life seems like that to me. 'It will do or it won't do.' Just for one clear, hard moment face it—then it's over, and you begin living again." She broke suddenly into a smile which ended in a sigh. "And life is very cozy—and sweet—when it's plain like that, I think."

"It is æstheticism," said Graham, obstinately. "'It will or it will not do.' Beauty, fitness, you see, is what you want."

The girl's lips tightened. "I never heard of æstheticism," she said. "My story may have suggested that, but it doesn't express me, then, please! It's only my way of living, and I liked it, so I couldn't help—I positively couldn't help—coming to you about it." She looked suddenly at the vestry door. The three minutes had tripled themselves. She began hurriedly to draw the scarf about her neck. "I don't see why I came," she said, frankly. "It all seems absurd and inexcusable to me now. I hope you will forget it."

"I shan't forget it," said Graham. He did not look altogether pleased. He drew a sharp breath suddenly, and turned himself half-round on his heel, and back again, boyishly. Then he put out his hand. "Well, we shall never get together on these points, I am afraid," he said, "but I hope you won't be too hard on me. I'm sorry I have disturbed you."

The girl was looking into his face with a restrained trouble in her own. "Oh, it isn't for me that it matters," she said, simply. There was a little sadness in her tone. She turned to go without more preliminary.

Graham followed her a step. "Where shall I see you again?—at Mrs. Gresham's? When?"

"If I were at home—in Parheim—you might come and sit by the fire, but," growing red, as if she were making too much of his question—"well, we shall meet somewhere."

She hesitated, smiled again waveringly, and was gone, through the vestry door. The lilies caught Graham's glance in the rebound. They looked to him peculiarly triumphant. With a vague sense of injury and reproach he turned his back upon them.

Graham found himself, on the way to Mrs. Van Astren's first-of-May dinner, in an anticipatory mood which he considered a compensating reaction from the dark moments which he had struggled through of late. He was mentally alert and ready for the handsome celebrity whom he was to take out; Mrs. Van Astren liked to confess, in deprecation of the praise given her dinners, that she prepared people for each other, and brought them together primed for talk. But as he took his place, a glance at his other side left him for a startled moment wordless.

"Miss Pemberton," said the hostess, presenting him—he was never far from her place—"you know Mrs. Gresham well—her niece."

"I know Miss Pemberton," said Graham.

"You needn't know me," said the girl, softly and youthfully, when her eyes were off them. "I have come prepared not to vex you. Mrs. Van Astren told me you were to be at one side, so that I might think what to say."

"What are you going to say?" asked Graham. He wondered for a flash why his amusement should be so grim. The girl did not seem to wonder—she accepted it.

"Nothing," she said, and seemed, simply, to mean it.

She had come out with a good-looking, broad-shouldered young man, evidently full of the pessimism caused by overeating.

"But if you can't have anything you like, you know," said the boyish, petulant voice, "what's the good of living? If a fellow can't have terrapin, nor cheese, nor even eggs—"

"Such certainty," said Graham's neighbor, screened from the sound beyond him, and replying to an appeal of his for a glimpse of things, "is like the illumination of a dreary road. You cannot mistake in your steps, yet there is no joy in taking them. Give me, rather, possible pitfalls. Hope, you know, is always behind a screen, and since it is hidden, marble may serve as well as life to embody it. Dare you look?"

"But if you can't have what you like," said the girl's voice at Graham's left, full of pity and gentle amusement, "can't you like, a little, what you have? One must find something—"

"Ah, you are pessimistic, too," said Graham, suddenly. His eyes were upon the wine-glass in front of him. His neighbor looked at him with a little surprise. Her publications had left small doubt in those days as to the trend of her mind.

"Is it an optimist who speaks of hope without a smile?" she asked—"I had almost said a smirk."

"It is sometimes the man with least hope who is most optimistic," said Graham, vaguely and, as he felt, with shallow reasoning.

Meanwhile, with gentle monotony, the conversation at his left continued. The girl laughed suddenly, cheerfully, with a certain gentle audacity. She might have felt in the air some of Graham's cynicism. "Well, I do not cook, a great deal, but I should bargain, easily, with some of these things that you hate, to make a respectable dish. And you should like it. If not, I should take the blame."

The boy was dubious—the matter was a serious one to him. But something beyond the subject seemed to prompt his answer, half-laughing. "Out of Indian meal? What could you make—a rarebit? Ah, you might—you make a fellow believe you, somehow."

Graham suddenly turned toward them. "I couldn't help hearing, Williams," he said, easily, past the girl's slightly startled face. "And I think I ought to warn you against bringing deep questions to Miss Pemberton for settlement. She plays with them. She has a witch's glass, you know, that shows her how really simple all questions are which we befogged mortals consider worth struggling with."

"Well, I don't know," said Williams, in his boyish drawl, with an attempt to answer the spirit if not the words of Graham's speech; "Miss Pemberton has just promised to make me a dish from things I hate—and make me like it." With a flash of really gentle gallantry he seemed to feel a necessity to defend the girl from Graham's wit. He exchanged a smile with her. Her face was full of gratitude.

Graham felt himself old and tyrannical. Had he grown aged and crabbed in an evening? He gazed at Williams; Williams, unflatteringly forgetful of him, was looking at the girl. Williams' eyes, boyish and preoccupied, were kindling with a spark of something more than admiration.

Graham spoke again, very smoothly. "So I argued," he said to Williams, "a genuine witch-potion you would get." He turned half away, as if he had finished with them. Then, irresistibly, he flashed a smile at the girl. The smile was barbed. "Confess and recant," he said, lightly. "It is your witch who beguiles us into questions. She blessed you with two gifts, that of having no problems of your own to trouble you, and the other, much alluring, of drawing out those of others, to the humiliation of the weak owners of them."

The girl's face had grown slightly pale, and the curves of her mouth gave place to straight lines, as she gazed intently at him. After an instant she seemed not unready to reply to his speech, unsmilingly.

"And in return for these gifts," she said, slowly, "what should I give my witch—something dreadful?"

"It is her reward, perhaps, to see the writhings of victims who have succumbed to the human weakness of confession," said Graham. His voice was still level and hard. He was looking keenly at her. She made an unconscious movement to bring her hands together.

"Yet it would be a good witch to endow one so," said the girl in a low even voice, "with no vexing questions of one's own, and the power to see those of others and help."

"Ah, but when there is no possibility of help!" said Graham, with ironic stubbornness.

The girl's eyes widened with responsive obstinacy; of the same sort which she had shown in their first talk, an obstinacy which resembled a lack of comprehension. Her forehead wrinkled. "When one wants to help, one can't choose but be able," she said with a little difficulty.

"The will—to bless—gives the power, you mean?" said Graham, showing, in spite of himself again, a slight surprise and disapproval at her positiveness.

She wavered from her assurance. "Not always so." She breathed deeply, and her face—turned toward the orchids which filled the centre of the table—took on a more intense earnestness. "Not always, not in many cases, maybe—one wants, pitifully, to help, sometimes, and sees no way—but, when one cares—intensely—it is given one—sometimes—to see a way."

Graham bent toward her. Neither of them—be it said in Graham's defense—saw any great personal bearing in his question. "And you mean, then, in my case—if you were the preacher—you would know—could tell me—my question?"

"I see—oh, I do see"—she repeated herself, shrinking as if to stay his refutation—"a way. It would be my way—"

The hostess was rising. Graham, by instinct, managed his partner's chair. But she was engaged in conclusion of a half-serious discussion with the man beyond her. Graham was left for an instant alone, his thoughts crowding, his head a little dizzy with them. Miss Pemberton was passing him. He suddenly seized the moment. He took a step to her side. There was a kind of roughness in the movement. If they had been small boy and small girl, his next act would have been to grasp her arm and turn her toward him. As it was she felt his compulsion; she paused instinctively before him.

"If you know, then, tell me!" he said.

Her eyes met his. "I should preach God," she said, with scorn—self-scorn, scorn for him—Graham could not analyze it. But suddenly he saw—or remembered vaguely, for in an instant she was gone—that her eyes, wide and flashing, like those of an animal which is courageous at bay, were heavy and bright with tears.

"She is a nice girl," said Mrs. Van Astren, neglecting her tea, "and, what is more rare, a sensible one, generally. But she has no more idea of her own best interests than this Oriental person on my cup. She needs someone to manage her."

"That surprises me," said Graham, after a moment. "I should have thought Miss Pemberton most capable, easily, of managing her own affairs."

"Easily, yes," said Mrs. Van Astren. "Wisely is another thing. She seems to decide too quickly, without a thought; she smiles all through it. You know"—Graham was looking puzzled—"Mrs. Gresham wants her here to live. Mrs. Gresham adores her, and there seems to be no reason why she shouldn't have her. There's a little home somewhere, with plenty more to fill it, and Alice—Miss Pemberton—wasted in it! Here she would be a success—her charms would be something tremendous."

"Her charms, you mean, set off by Mrs. Gresham's gilding," said Graham. He was looking abstractedly over his tea.

Mrs. Van Astren looked sidewise at him. "You don't admire her? Ah, just like a man! Scents brains as a war horse does the battle—and flees from them. All the same, she would have splendid chances—with simpler men.—" The lady smiled appeasingly at him. "Did you see young Williams at my dinner?"

"I saw him," said Graham. He put his cup down upon the table beside him. "She will not come, you say, to Mrs. Gresham?"

"She smiles through tears at her aunt, and says how she loves her kindness—Mrs. Gresham is really wrought up and angry with her—but it is 'no' all the same, persistently, gently. It's vastly irritating. She goes to-morrow, I believe. Parheim, I think she calls the place. A dreary, out-of-the-world village!"

"She will have leisure there, perhaps, to regret it," said Graham. He took up his cup again, unmindful of its emptiness.

"Regret it! Ah, if you could see her! The softness, the kindness, the gladness—positively—of her 'no!' She will never see her mistake." Mrs. Van Astren sighed with vexation, before her own kind heart melted. "And I hope she won't, of course. I should hate to see her unhappy. The girl interests me. I'm sorry you don't like her. She's a queer, gentle, obstinate thing—and, in spite of your cynicism, immensely pretty. Look at her, in that white frock—just out of Parheim. She's discarded Mrs. Gresham's grandeurs, out of principle, doubtless. The absurdity! But don't say it doesn't become her!"

Mrs. Van Astren's voice sank as the girl approached them. There was tea at Mrs. Gresham's. Everybody was there, chatting. Miss Pemberton, in a white gown which, as Mrs. Van Astren had observed, had a simplicity more actual and intimate than the rich simplicity of her dinner-gown, was dispensing cream and sugar. There was a gentle gravity in her face, and a serious preoccupation with her task. Graham had come to Mrs. Gresham's early, only to find that others had felt the same impulse, and were before him, talking in pleased groups under the soft light of candles which improved upon the misty spring air and grayish light outside. Of a sudden he had felt a rather strange distaste for conversation, and had slipped into a corner before a picture. Here Mrs. Van Astren had found him, and had made him have tea with her. Miss Pemberton came up to them.

"Oh, I am too late," she said, sorrowfully-looking at their cups. "You've had tea and no sugar. Aunt Helen will scold."

Mrs. Van Astren smiled up at her with the friendly freedom of an older woman. "If it were only for that that she should scold you, my dear, you would deserve to come off easily." Her eyes emphasized the slyness of her meaning.

The girl looked at her frankly. Then she colored a little and laughed. "Oh, that, Mrs. Van Astren," she said, directly. "Believe me, that will be all right: and I have been scolded, so my punishment is attended to. Aunt will not think of it long. How can she? She goes to Paris in a week or two. She so loves Paris!—the thought of it drowns everything already." For all her frankness, she was leading, with a little embarrassment, away from the subject.

Mrs. Van Astren was not to be led. "And you—you do not care for Paris?" she asked.

The girl's eyes responded for her suddenly with a flash of light. "I love Paris, too," she said, with a little breathlessness. "It is a dream-city to me."

"And you choose to keep it so—like Yarrow—unvisited?" said Mrs. Van Astren, more gently.

The girl looked surprised. "Oh, no, no, I mean to go there." She paused suddenly, smiling. "Some time. We all have our things to work for—one of mine is to go to such places." She was beckoned away by some one, and smiled the last words over her shoulder.

"It's the oddest thing in the world," said Mrs. Van Astren, "that she doesn't seem to see that she might have her dream true, now."

"The odd thing is,' said Graham, for the first time in the afternoon seeming to lend thought to his words, "that she gets it into the air that she isn't missing anything."

Mrs. Van Astren laughed delightedly. "Do you feel that, too? I do, through all my irritation. It's like a delusive fragrance—"

Miss Pemberton was coming back to them with more tea. "You are to have this very sweet," she said. She occupied herself supplying them with everything.

Graham had not spoken. He lingered a moment over the tea-tray.

"To-morrow you go to Parheim?" he said. "Isn't your going sudden—rather unexpected?"

"My mother wrote for me," said the girl, "or, at least—the same thing—wrote and wished me there. It is so with us; she wishes and we are there, like genii of the lamp." She laughed, a little painfully. "You will think now, surely, that I dwell with witches and hobgoblins."

Graham had helped himself to everything. There was nothing to delay her, yet she paused a moment, half wistfully, blushing. Graham took a third piece of sugar, slowly. "I was a cad," he said, "beyond pardon."

The girl, dumb before this sudden remark, was recalled by Mrs. Van Astren to her small but onerous task, and directed to some aspirant to sugar and cream.

Graham found her presently in a corner.

"One must get away, a little, from even the best things, to really enjoy them, don't you think?" she said.

Graham understood that this was not so much an apology for her own aloofness, as an explanation of his. "You have found an excuse for my social remissness," he said.

"I have thought of what you said," he continued, referring to that first morning. All lightness was out of his tone; it was full of resolution.

The girl in an instant stopped him. Her words came with an eagerness which showed that she had wished for this opening. "Don't think of it—don't remember it!" she said. "I scarcely know what I said, but I know it doesn't matter. I was carried quite away, somehow—else I shouldn't have dared. I have been shamed ever since; I have wished to ask you to forget it. Only, believe, too, that I did not mean ill."

"Don't recant now," Graham smiled, somewhat wearily, and this time there was no possible sting in his words. "Don't, please, abandon your position just as you have brought me to it. I have thought of it all, what you said, and what you must have meant—what it could mean to me—and I think—I think"—he seemed groping his way mentally, making sure of his steps as he went—"I think I see—somewhat—in it. It is like a promise of light, light farther on, if I keep my face toward it."

"Oh, are you sure," put in the girl, "that you don't see too much in it? I couldn't—why, you know"—she was fairly intense with her frankness—"I couldn't have meant much. I don't know the first steps of theology, of reasoning—"

Graham gazed at her strangely. "Ah, that is your consistency!" he said. "I have stolen your idea, and it is mine now. I can't help transmuting it. I can't"—he looked distressed for a moment—"I can't see it your way. I can't even see it my way, yet." He shook his head vexedly as over a problem. Slowly his eyes lost their look of keen thought, and finally rested on her, with unmistakable appeal. "You know, the fact is," he finished, in another tone, an exceedingly boyish one, "I can't see yet—until you show me more—the way."

The girl looked, quite simply, distressed. "I couldn't help you one word," she said. "I can't explain anything, or say anything, to help."

"Explain!" said Graham. He laughed freely and confidently. "It's for you just to live."

"I am sorry," said the girl, without catching his spirit; her eyes were full of doubt and wistfulness. "Your way was brilliant—is brilliant—you will find your own way to an answer, and"—she lifted her eyes brightly—"I shall hear of it, yet, in Parheim."

Graham stood transfixed. "Oh, Parheim!" he said. He bit his lip. He looked suddenly over at the groups which were, with much gayety, disintegrating slowly. The great drawing-room, with its candle-lighted distances and shadowed corners, lent its rather sombre dignity gracefully to this amiable levity. "You dont like any of this?" said Graham.

Her eyes followed his, at his question, and came back full of amazement. "Why, how unworldly do you think me?" she exclaimed. "You and Mrs. Van Astren. Could one help loving it? There is something within one that cares for comfort and ease and beauty, without one's own doing, don't you think so? For weeks before and after, I dream of visits to Aunt Helen. I never felt wicked in liking them, they are so full—of, well, of business made beautiful, somehow. Everything goes smoothly and guardedly. It has a beauty, hasn't it?" She appealed to him to justify her impression.

"You leave it all easily," said Graham in a low voice. "That is," he hesitated, "at least, you don't care to stay with it. Forgive me—I forgot I shouldn't know—Mrs. Van Astren told me—about your aunt."

"Oh, said the girl, comprehending. She laughed. "Of course Mrs. Van Astren has found a mystery in it. She loves mysteries—she will have one out of me. There is nothing strange about this. I couldn't stay, you know." Graham accepted this too fully; she saw that he thought she spoke of family reasons outside his right to know. "It is only," she added, hastily, "that I go where there is most use for me. Aunt Helen doesn't need me; at home they do—not dreadfully, but some." To his surprise, she gave a sudden girlish note of scorn. "One must do something!" Her bosom swelled. "One must fill a real need, however little." Her eyes had a sort of inspiration in them.

Graham gazed fixedly—as he felt, stolidly. "But there was nothing else to sway you?" he said, bending toward her suddenly, "nothing you hate in this way of life? Nothing—you love—at Parheim? Was it really only that they need you—and only a little, too, you say?"

The girl's docility had lasted a long time. Her spirit was beginning to rouse itself. She looked at him with a flush of feminine hurt at masculine distrust. "It hasn't seemed a little thing to me," she said; "at least, it is my nature. I am not made strong and healthy for nothing; surely I am made to help. The feeling is strong within me!"

"I said you had no questions!" said Graham, with sudden irrelevance.

"I haven't—any hard ones!" she put this in justly.

His doubt seemed persistent. "And if life here were not easy, if it promised work, trouble, tangles for just your hands to unweave—if you were needed here—then?"

"Why, I should come," she cried, with readiness. Why should he question it?

She found Graham's eyes upon her. Slowly, without more words from him, his look deepened, questioned, pleaded, expressed something to her. Before it the fire and independence went out of the girl's face. She trembled suddenly as if something had shaken her. Her hands fluttered before her; she swayed a little toward him, mute, and as pale and suddenly forlorn as a flower in the wind.

Graham himself was pale. "May I come to Parheim?" he said, bending to her.

All at once, with a violence the color came back to her face, in a wave which flooded her from neck to hair, and made her crimson as if from sudden anger. She moved back, away from him, and yet she inclined toward him, too.

"I believe—must I not believe?—that it was for this—and more—that you were sent to me." In another instant he would have held her hand, before the multitude.

Mrs. Van Astren saved them. Unawares she swept into their corner. "Someone wants you, my dear"—she put her hand upon the girl's arm—"to say good-bye."

"Good-bye?" faltered the girl, confusedly.

Graham's eyes sought hers for permission. "It isn't—for long," he said to Mrs. Van Astren, and flushed; his voice was not quite steady.

"Ah, you two!" began Mrs. Van Astren. "Not going home? My dear! Why consistency—thou art—nowhere!" It was there, big, bright as the jewel on the lady's finger. But Graham did not point it out; it did not matter. And the girl was gone.

Graham walked home, through a misting rain. Spring was all about him, a backward, city spring. He broke off a wet twig from one of the trees bordering the street, and carried it home with him. The buds were bursting from their brown casings. Graham's heart vibrated with a promise of new things.

MOON BRINGS AN EARLY EASTER

The Glad Anniversary Comes This Year on March 23.

EARLY LENT ALSO

For only the fourth time since 1788, 325 years ago, Lent will begin this winter as early as February 12. Easter will fall on March 23. This forty-day season prescribed by the church as one of fasting and prayer never has begun any earlier, except in one year, 1818. Easter that year fell on March 22.

Owing to the early arrival of Lent, the "season" will be one of the shortest on record. Easter frequently has fallen in as late as April 15 or April 7, and probably will hit in around some of these dates between 1914 and 2013.

In the latter year, according to the church almanac, the date again will be March 23. So those who suffer by a falling off of business this winter in consequence of the early date need not look for a repetition of the situation during their lifetime, for it will not happen again for 100 years. In the past Easter has come as early as March 23, in 1788, 1845 and 1856.

The moon is responsible, and according to officials at the federal nautical almanac office, this responsibility for such changes in dates is not borne by Luna, as observing people see her in the skies, but by another moon, called by these officials "the ideal moon" and "the ecclesiastical moon."

"Easter," one of these officials said recently, "and with it, of course, the beginning of Lent, is a movable feast, and is fixed by the 'ideal moon' adopted by the churches hundreds of years ago, when they were attempting to settle upon a fixed date for Easter. There is very little difference between the true moon and the 'ideal moon' in their phases.

Sometimes the 'ideal moon' or 'ecclesiastical moon' may just miss the true moon. It is a complicated astronomical subject, but it is safe to say that Easter comes on the first Sunday after the first full moon after March 21."

In the early church, Easter was identical in date with the Passover as, in fact, the two festivals are identical in their root. After the Nicaean council of A. D. 325, Christians adopted the Jewish method of reckoning time by lunations, which are the movements of the moon. These lunations do not tally with the facts of astronomy. The result is that Easter calculations are so extraordinarily difficult as to lead to occasional mistakes such as that of 1818 when Easter was observed on the wrong day.

LABOR BUREAU MAN HAS WOES

Compelled to Move and Old Assistant Will Not Retain Job.

LOWRY SAYS HE'S IT

Louis C. S. Schroeder, president of the city council and head of the local branch of the Indiana free employment bureau, was perturbed today because he had to move his office and because the recommendation that he, Edward G. Hoffman and John Wessel, jr., made was ignored by Thomas Brolley, state statistician, in refusing to name Mrs. A. A. Meyers, assistant in the Fort Wayne office.

Harry P. Lowry, former deputy sheriff under Aaron Reichelderfer, reported at the office and said he had been selected for the place. Mr. Schroeder had a letter saying a man had been selected, but the name was not given and as Lowry had no credentials Mrs. Meyers held the place and will hold it until an official announcement has been made of the name of her successor.

"Eighty per cent. of the business that goes through this office has to do with women applicants for places," said Mr. Schroeder, "and I believe that there should be a woman on the job. Mrs. Meyers had succeeded not only in increasing the volume of business, but has been better able to obtain and place female help than I ever thought could be done."

Two Much Noise.

Because men and women seeking employment through the office stand in the corridors and talk and make so much noise going in and out Mr. Schroeder was told he would have to take office room with the township trustee in the northeast corner of the building.

Mr. Schroeder says this will never do as his office opens at 9 and closes at 4, under the law, and for an hour in the forenoon and another in the afternoon the trustee would be besieged with applicants. He went over to the city hall to find a place; but failed to locate one and may rent an office somewhere.

CRUSHED BETWEEN CARS.

J. O'Donnell, Brakeman, Loses Life at Leipsic.

J. O'Donnell, brakeman on the Nickel Plate, was caught between cars he was helping to handle in the company's yards in Leipsic at 3 o'clock this morning and so badly injured that he died a few minutes later. O'Donnell was about 25 years old, and a resident of Leipsic. He came here two weeks ago and secured employment with the company, and was immediately assigned to yard duty at Leipsic, where the company maintains a switch engine and crew during the busy seasons. He was said to have been an experienced brakeman, though little is known about him here as he never resided in Fort Wayne.

The prince of Wales is said to be a good trick bicycle rider.

OFFICE IS FREE FROM CONFUSION

Postal Force is Handling Increased Business Nicely.

NEW STAMPS ARRIVE

More than 250,000 parcel post stamps were in the second consignment just received at the Fort Wayne postoffice, and to insure against a further shortage, such as was experienced last week. Assistant Postmaster William J. Hess has placed another requisition for stamps which will reach the city within a few days.

Starting the week with a clean slate, officials at the local office are delighted over the fact that thus far the force of clerks and carriers has been large enough to take care of all the increased business occasioned by the inauguration of the parcel post system. In spite of the fact that local manufacturing institutions are daily making use of the new system by mailing out large consignments of articles which prior to this time were sent by express, there has been no confusion in handling the mail.

Only comparatively few articles mailed this morning are being held on account of delinquent postage. It seems that at last the public is beginning to understand that parcel post mail can not be accepted for transit unless it bears distinct parce post stamps and a card containing the name of the sender. It is hoped by Postmaster Hanna that the people will soon learn that parcel post mail can not be sent with only the ordinary postage stamps.

No extremely bulky packages have been mailed or received at the local office. The largest article for parcel post was a suitcase addressed to Philadelphia. Farmers are using the new system more freely, and Saturday afternoon a consignment of eggs was mailed for local delivery.

HE SNAPPED GRANT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—"I have photographed every president since General Grant," says a Washington protographer, "and I have found President Taft the easiest poser of them all. President Taft isn't particularly fond of having his picture taken, but when he does face the lens he falls naturally into the right position, doesn't have to be told to smile, doesn't stiffen up like so many photographic subjects and generally knows the game so well that all of his pictures are successful.

"Mr. Roosevelt is an excessively hard man to pose for the camera. He is what we call a frigid subject, and it is impossible, it seems, for him to fall easily and naturally into the desired position. He unconsciously fights the photographer, as we say. When in the chair for a bust picture he has a way of thrusting his chin far forward in a grotesquely aggressive way which, in a picture, would make him appear to be saying to the beholder of the portrait: 'Say, what's that you are talking about? Say it again. I dare you to say it again!'

"And Mr. Roosevelt is generally stricken with the fidgets when he faces the camera. It appears to be a positive misery to him to stick to one position for more than two seconds at a stretch. The very low cut collar that he wears appears to bother him when he is before the lens, and he has a way of incessantly grabbing at the front of the collar with his right hand as if he wanted to jerk it off and toss it away. His hands appear to be doing something at all times, and I never photographed a man who had less natural pose. I often wonder how Mr. Roosevelt ever sleeps at night—how he gets to sleep, that is.

"Once I asked Mr. Roosevelt to permit me to photograph him without his eye-glasses, just as a sort of novelty, but he wouldn't consent to this.

"'The eyeglasses are just as much a part of me as my ears are,' he told me, 'and I have a bad staring look without them. I look like somebody seeing a ghost.'

"He never brushes down his hair if it happens to be tousled when he removes his hat upon entering the studio.

"'I don't like sleek hair,' he informed me once, when I handed him a brush before starting to pose him, and the best that he would do was nervously to smooth down his hair with his hands.

"During the last two years of Roosevelt's incumbency he didn't much like to be photographed full length or three-quarters, for he grew undeniably stout in spite of all his tennis, horseback riding and wrestling. He is always in a terrific hurry to get out of a studio, but beyond a doubt is fond of looking at his finished photographs. He always wants proofs of all the plates, and generally ends by ordering copies struck from all the different negatives.

"McKinley was a singularly easy man to pose for the camera—patient, plastic, submissive to the operator's requests and possessed of a certain natural grace that made him a valued photographic subject. He, too, toward the latter years of his life, grew to dislike any but bust pictures of himself, for his tendency toward stoutness was ever increasing.

"But no photograph ever quite did Mr. McKinley justice. All in all, he had the most remarkable pair of eyes that I ever saw in a man's head. They were literally as mellow as the eyes of an antelope—brooding, darkly luminous, suffused with pity, and yet they were strong and wholly masculine eyes, too.

"It was hard for a photographer to catch him without an expression of almost indescribable melancholy in his face. His smiles were rare and fine, but they passed very quickly. He was often compared with Napoleon for facial resemblance, but his face was much finer than Napoleon's. It was as strong, but lacked the hardness of the Corsican's. For a handsome man, with a really noble head, Mr. McKinley was the least vain personage that I ever leveled a camera at.

"I suppose there are few people who know that Mr. Cleveland had a decided aversion to the camera. It almost took wild horses to get him to be photographed while he was president. Had it not been for his admirable wife, we might never have got him at all, for she always assisted us in our efforts to obtain sittings from him.

"The curious rugged honesty, not to say stubbornness, of the man was shown by the fact that he despised a photograph of himself the negative of which had been retouched. He wanted the picture just as it had been taken. He liked, for example, to stick his left hand beneath the flap of his frock coat in the conventional statesman pose. But that sort of thing went out of date with Webster, Clay and Calhoun and was made ridiculous by black-faced stump speakers of the minstrel stage when Mr. Cleveland was yet a boy. All the same, we always had trouble in preventing him from striking that outworn attitude every time he wanted a three-quarter or full length photograph."

ROBBER IS ASHAMED.

Returns Stolen Sermons With Apology Fastened to Grip.

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 6.—Conscience stricken after reading one of the 400 sermons stolen in a suit case he stole from the Rev. H. W. Brewer, pastor of the Methodist church of Peru, Ia., in the Santa Fe station recently, an unknown man returned the loot to the platform of the depot an hour later, according to the minister.

A piece of paper was half tucked into the grip. In almost illeligible words he explained why he came to take back the property. The note ran:

"I stole this suit case because I was hungry, and I meant to sell it. When I found the sermons I started to read them. By the time I had read the first I was so affected that I was almost persuaded to return the grip. When I was half through the second I decided to take it back."

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold. Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

CUPID IS HIS BUSINESS FOE.

Theatrical Man Has Lost Five Stenographers in Two Years.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Driven to desperation by the tendency of his stenographers to soon as he has them "broken in," Samuel Thall, theatrical man, is contemplating advertising in the papers thus:

"Homely girl wanted; must be a manhater."

"It's either that," he said, "or I'll have to make the applicants for positions sign a contract not to marry within a given time."

Within the last two years he has lost five good stenographers, three of whom deserted the typewriter and shorthand pad for the bonds of matrimony. The latest one so to desert was Miss Hazel Frost, now Mrs. Clarence Jacobson.

SLEDGE STRUCK GENSEL IN SIDE

Says Handle Was Defective and He Asks $1,500 of Company.

NEWS IN THE COURTS

Andrew J. Gensel says in a damage suit filed today that a sledge hammer in the hands of a fellow employe broke and the hammer struck him in the left side, inflicting injuries that he thinks worth about $1,500; and he demands this amount of the Hannan-Hickey Construction company.

He charges that he was employed on the elevation of the tracks at Fairfield avenue and that one of the fellow workmen was using the sledge in question and that the company's agents know the handle was rotten and that they are responsible for the injury.

Oldest Residents in Court.

Five witnesses testified during the day in the hearing in the superior court of the suit of George Bicner against Cyrus Townsend and the city of Fort Wayne, whose combined ages were 380. Four are A. G. Barnett, Byron Thompson Lucien P. Stapleford and John Olds.

The suit involves a strip of ground which Bicner says is his by reason of possession for forty years and these witnesses were used to testify about conditions at what is now Clay street and the Nickel Plate tracks in the days before the old canal.

Decree is Granted.

In the superior court this afternoon Cora Osborn was granted a divorce from Warren Osborn.

Licenses Transferred.

Transfers were made in the commissioners' court today of the saloon license of the Wayne hotel to Arthur Peters, agent for the Wayne Hotel company, and by Gerhart and Venderly to W. D. Collins.

Fisher Case On Hearing.

The case against Frank Fisher, charged with embezzling $100 of the funds of William Klitske, of the Fort Wayne Dairy company, and which he said he lost in gambling in saloons and pool rooms, was placed on trial in the circuit court this afternoon. It was arranged for him to enter a plea of guilty and an effort was made to get him a suspended sentence.

Brick Through Window.

Mary J. Fabian says that one reason she wants a divorce from Julian W. Fabian is that he threw a brick through the window of their home at 419 East Lewis street. She also charges that he threw her out and she struck a washing machine in transit, that he said she was the very devil around the house and that he nailed up the door one time while she was in the house.

They were married three years ago and each had been married before and each had children. He is accused of excessive drinking and she attributes their troubles to this source. Judge B. B. Dreibelbiss is her attorney.

TOO FRAGILE FOR RALSTON.

Governor-Elect Selects Heavier Chair Than One in Use.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6. Governor-elect Samuel Ralston today renounced the chair that has served the governors of Indiana for several years and selected one more substantially built to accommodate his 275 pounds. Mr. Ralston tried out the chair and announced that he felt uncomfortable in it. The new chair is ample in every proportion.

The chair now used by Governor Marshall, vice president elect, may be given him as a relic of his administration. It is plenty large for the next vice president, as he weights only 110 pounds.

ROBBERY IS REPORTED.

Herman L. Schust, 712 Home avenue, reported to the police that his residence had been entered by thieves and two pairs of trousers were rifled. Nothing else was taken, but one pair of the trousers was found outside with the contents of the pockets scattered over the ground.

RAIL OFFICIAL HELD FOR WRECK

Division Supt. White is Placed Under Arrest at Indianapolis.

GIVES $5,000 BOND

Indianapolis, Jan. 6.—Two arrests were made today on indictments growing out of the investigation of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad wreck in Irvington, a suburb, Nov. 13, when sixteen persons were killed.

E. B. White, division superintendent of the railroad, one of the sixteen officials of the company who were indicted, was released on $5,000 bond.

Carl Gross, head brakeman on the freight train which was in collision with the passenger, was taken from the hospital to jail and had not been released this afternoon. Judge Markey, of the criminal court, said he would send a physician to visit Gross and determine if he should be returned to the hospital.

Capiases for the fifteen other officials of the road and for Willis York, engineer of the freight train, are being held up by Judge Markey until he has decided on the best way to arrest the men.

CLAPP AGAIN FAILS.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Chairman Clapp, of the senate committee investigating campaign funds, failed again today to have his committee authorized to investigate the presidential campaign of 1912. Senator Oliver's objection that the Clapp resolutions should be referred to the committee on contingent expenses because it involved expenditure of money was sustained. Regular republicans upheld Senator Oliver, while the progressives and democrats attacked his position.

MINNESOTA LAW ANNULLED.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The Minnesota reciprocal demurrage law of 1907 was today annulled as unconstitutional by the supreme court of the United States. The court held that the federal government had legislated on the subject and so taken authority all power, if any existed, from the states to legislative on it as far as interstate commerce was concerned. Several states have similar laws.

"ROOSEVELT TALKS TOO MUCH" DECLARES BOY WONDER IN COURSE OF STARTLING INTERVIEW.

Haven Hart, "submitting" to an interview, while engaged at clay-modeling—He says he expects to be a lawyer, but would rather "be a farmer, and sweat."

(By Mark Larkin.)

Los Gatos, Cal., Jan. 6.—Haven Hart, California boy marvel, sat at a table surrounded by sundry articles including dominoes, puzzle maps, blocks and watercolors.

He didn't say much; just looked shyly out of the corner of his eye occasionally at the reporter and continued with his play. He was hauling dominoes across the table in one-half of a broken rubber ball and as he stacked them up, he counted the spots on each and added them together, the total being the name of each man that the domino represented.

"What's that?" he asked abruptly, pointing to a small black box with a lot of triggers and screws on it that rested on the table.

"Oh, that's a camera," was the reply.

This was the opening wedge for conversation.

"Oh! are you going to make my picture?"

"Sure thing! What are you doing?"

"Playing soldier," was the reply. "This," pointing to the pile of dominoes, "is the Bulgarian army"—"Five and four are eight"

"Oh! Oh! interrupted his mother, "what's that!—count the spots."

"1, 2, 3, 9," he tolled off, putting his finger on each red spot. "Nine! Why, I made a mistake!"

"Yes," continued his mother, "that man tried to give us a wrong name, so we'll put him in jail. Write him down on the blackboard!"

So Haven wrote him down slowly and laboriously, but perfectly correct. He wrote the four under the five, drew a line and put nine, the answer, under that. That put "him" in jail.

"What are you going to be when you grow up?" the reporter asked.

"I think I'll be a lawyer—but I'd rather be a cowboy and lasso bulls and steers."

"Wouldn't you like to be president?"

"Yes, but I'd rather be a farmer and sweat all day."

Of course, he got a laugh with this one and it so disconcerted him that he ran to his mother and cuddled up close to her, looking genuinely shy.

Once, when the family was out for a walk, Haven stopped by the wayside to play and the folks meandered along without him. This didn't make any hit with the boy. When he caught up with them, he was indignant.

"'You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless thing!'" he declaimed, quoting from Julius Caesar. "Why didn't you wait for me?"

On another occasion, he wanted to get in bed about daylight one morning with his parents. Being awakened at that hour was annoying and his mother declined most emphatically. But upon thinking it over, she relented inwardly, and was quite sorry for being so severe. Evidently, the boy read her thoughts, for he said:

"'Let your heart speak,' mother," repeating what the arrowmaker had said to Laughing Water in the poem of Hiawatha.

These and many other quotations from the classics, applied with such unmistakable correctness, show beyond any possible doubt that this baby boy of four and a half years understands what he reads and hears.

When asked to read a little from Julius Ceasar for the reporter, he said: "Well, I really couldn't do it right now!" That is his favorite expression when he wants to dodge any issue. But after a little persuasion he opened the book at random and read a passage slowly, and with some effort, but not with the parrot-like precision of most children that is, the result of memorizing. Occasionally, when a word stuck him, he spelled it out, pronounced it, and then went on, getting real expression into the lines.

His political views are that "Roosevelt talks too much."

Haven does many chores, such as splitting kindling and building the fire. When he splits kindling, he plays he is Abraham Lincoln and when he draws maps, he is Christopher Columbus. Everything is a game with him; life is one continuous romp.

When asked what he liked to do most, he replied:

"Oh, I like to make maps or draw or play or make a noise," which expression was certainly from the heart, out.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Jan. 6.—Most of the important stocks sold at slightly higher figures in the first transactions today. American Tobacco made an exceptional gain of 1½. Southern Pacific and Western Maryland were heavy.

Wall street awaited expectantly the convening of the supreme court today after its holiday recess, with the idea that the decisions long looked for might be announced. The strength of Union Pacific offset the speculative attacks against specialties which recently have been weak, and at noon the advance in the general market became more pronounced. Bonds were firm.

The market closed weak. A pause in the selling movement failed to bring much of a recovery and the bears took advantage of the dearth of buying orders to make another determined attack.

NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.

New York, Jan. 6.—Money on call easy, 2½@3% per cent.; ruling rate, 3% per cent.; closing bid, 2¾ per cent.; offered at 3 per cent.; time loans, steady; 60 days, 5@5¼ per cent.; 90 days, 5 per cent.; six months, 4½@5 per cent.

FIVE MORE WINGS WILL BE ERECTED

St. Joseph's Hospital to Be Made Biggest in the Country.

TAKE FIRST STEPS

Initial plans are now under discussion toward making St. Joseph's hospital in this city one of the largest institutions of its kind in the United States. According to reliable information detailed plans for proposed new buildings are now being considered, and within due course of time five new wings are to be constructed on the property on West street and Broadway.

The new wings are to be uniform in architecture and style. They are to be connected with the new wing just completed and when finished will form a uniform block of buildings with a central court, while the floor plans and general style will be practically the same as the famous German hospital in Berlin, Germany.

It is said that as soon as the new wing is in condition to be occupied, those in charge of the institution will begin work on plans for other buildings. The front of the old hospital building is to be torn down and remodeled, so that the style will be uniform with the new wing facing on Broadway.

A representative of the firm of Gault & Gitch, of Terre Haute, architects, who executed plans for the new wing now being completed, was in Fort Wayne this morning, and briefly discussed the proposed hospital arrangements.

"While nothing definitely has been done at this date," said Mr. Gault, "the general scheme is to build five more wings to the hospital, making them all uniform in size and architecture. Of course I cannot say when this will be done, but I expect some of the work to start either late this year or early next year. It is likely that the old hospital building will be remodeled just as soon as the new wing is ready for occupancy, and after that is finished the additional buildings will then be considered."

THE JANUARY CLEARANCE AND SPECIAL SALES

Are Interesting lessons in economy, for during these sales highly desirable new merchandise is offered at much less than usual prices and sweeping reductions on all lines marked for clearance make the value giving extraordinary.

The Linen Sale

Our patrons have always found it profitable to patronize our January sale of linens. This year the advantages are greater than ever. We have made ample preparations to supply table linens, towels, toweling and crashes of quality at prices that are exceptionally low.

Domestics

This is buying time and saving time for everything that comes under the head of Domestics; that includes sheetings, muslins, sheets, pillow cases, tickings, outings, flannels ,ginghams, calicoes and percales. The first arrivals of new spring ginghams are now on sale at special prices.

Blankets

Don't overlook this opportunity to secure desirable blankets and comforts; you can buy them now at prices far below real value; for instance: Full size cotton plaid blankets, that were $2.75, are now, $1.90; full size cotton blankets, in Scotch plaids, that were $2.75, are now $2.25; large size half-wool blankets, that were $3.50, are now $2.75; full size all-wool blankets that were $5.50, now $4.25. Savings worth while on our entire stock of blankets and comforts.

Dress Goods

We have gathered together a few lots of dress goods and marked them for clearance. Not undesirable styles by any means, but all this season's goods. 50c novelty dress fabrics, in diagonals and fancy mixtures, are now 35c; stylish dress goods, in popular weaves and shades, that were $1.00 and $1.50, are now 79c; imported dress goods, in novel two-toned effects, that were $2.50, are now $1.25.

Lace Curtains

We find that we are overstocked on Nottingham lace curtains. There is only one way of relief, and that is a radical cut in prices. We have applied the knife. You can buy, now, 85c curtains for 75c; $1.00 curtains for 85c; $1.25 curtains for $1.00; $2.00 curtains for $1.50, and so on through the entire line.

Carpets, Rugs

Home furnishers will find most tempting values here in Carpets and Rugs. Note these special items and profit thereby: Ingrain carpets that were 75c, now 63c a yard; all-wool ingrain carpets, now 58c a yard; wool filled ingrain carpets, 48c a yard; tapestry Brussels carpets, the 75c grade, now 55c a yard; the 90c grade, 70c a yard; rugs, size 9 by 12 feet, $13.50 value, for $9.75, $15.00 value for $12.25, $17.50 value for $15.00, $27.50 value for $22.50; and proportionate reductions all through the line.

BILL TO CURB LOAN BROKERS

Stringent Law Proposed to Protect the Small Borrower.

WILL PROVE CHECK

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6. Subterfuges used by petty loan brokers to increase their revenue above the legal rate of interest in Indiana are swept aside in a bill, to be introduced in the general assembly, which provides for the licensing and regulating of loan brokers.

The provisions of the bill are said to be the most drastic that ever have been directed against the petty loan brokers of the state. "It shall be unlawful," declares the first section of the bill, "to engage in the business of lending money upon which a rate of more than six per cent. is charged either directly as interest or as interest and additional charges for any purpose connected with the loan, or any security of any kind, direct or collateral, tangible or intangible, without procuring a license as a petty loan broker."

The bill was drafted by John Lapp, reference clerk in the state library, and is said to have been approved by Governor Marshall. Its preparation follows an effort of state officials to undermine many of the evils incident to the operations of loan brokers in the state, it is said.

Any person or firm wishing to engage in the petty loan brokerage business must first obtain a license of the circuit court of the county by paying the sum of $50 annually. The application for a license must be accompanied by a bond to the state in the penal sum of $3,000. Only one place of business can be maintained under the same license.

Brokers will not be permitted to demand or receive from borrowers a greater rate of interest than 2 per cent. per month and a sum not exceeding $3 for the first examination of the property to be mortgaged or the investigation of the credit of endorsers or sureties when an endorsed note is taken as security and for drawing the necessary papers.

To prevent brokers from splitting up a loan for the purpose of increasing the cost the bill specifically states "that it shall be unlawful for any petty loan broker to make more than one loan on which such charges or any part thereof are made from the same borrower at the same time."

The bill of sale or chattel mortgage taken by a petty loan broker shall state fully the amount of the loan, "the rate of interest thereon, the period or periods at or within which the same is to be repaid, the amount of money actually received by the borrower as a result of said loan, and the cost to the borrower and a written memorandum of said items signed by said petty loan broker shall be given to the borrower."

Violations of any provision of the proposed act are to be construed as misdemeanors and all persons upon conviction of the misdemeanor "shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100 for the first offense." The second offence carries with it a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or both.

Every loan in connection with which a violation of the law has taken place is to be null and void, and the borrower shall be entitled to recover from the lender any and all sums paid or returned on account of or in connection with the loan.

FARMERS MAY BUY ELEVATOR.

Several farmers of Aboite township have started a movement to buy the Gideon Bowen grain elevator at Aboite, and a meeting will be held on Monday night to discuss the practicability of forming a stock company for purchasing the elevator. It is thought that it can be bought for $4,000, and if the deal is made the new firm will be known as the farmers' Elevator company.

The United Commercial Travelers will enjoy a dance and box lunch on next Saturday in the Odd Fellows hall.

CALL JUDGE AND JURORS PARTIAL

Chicago Labor Federation Condemns Dynamiting Case Outcome.

MOVE TO GET BAIL

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Resolutions passed by the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday condemned the entire procedure by which thirty-three labor leaders were convicted in Indianapolis of participation in a nation-wide "dynamite conspiracy." Federal Judge Albert B. Anderson, the government agents and the jury were included in the sweeping condemnation which the conservative element in the organization vainly opposed.

Principal among the denunciations in the resolutions were:

"Prosecution of the union leaders was based on 'trumped up charges.'

"Judge Anderson was partial to the prosecution.

"The jury was prejudiced against the defendants and was influenced by government agents.

"The case was an attempt of the government to crush organized labor by 'railroading' its chiefs."

The full text of the resolutions was not given out.

The resolutions did not go through without a fight. Edwin R. Wright, Illinois State Federation of Labor, warned the delegates to "look before they leaped."

"There is no need for haste," he said. "This matter can be delayed two weeks without harm, whereas organized labor may be irretrievably injured by the passage of these resolutions in their present form. Organized labor was not on trial at Indianapolis. Organized labor does not approve of the acts of violence of which these men are charged."

The resolutions pledge the loyalty of the federation to the convicted men.

MOVE TO GET BAIL.

McClory Starts for Leavenworth With Blank Applications.

Indianapolis, Jan. 6.—As an immediate step toward procuring bail for the thirty-two members of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers now in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kas., J. E. McClory, acting secretary-treasurer of the union, departed for Leavenworth yesterday afternoon, taking with him blank bond applications. McClory did not discuss his plans other than to say that he was taking blanks to the prisoners for their signatures.

McClory intimated, however, that practically sufficient money or securities had been pledged to obtain the release of all the prisoners except Herbert S. Hockin, who has announced that he will make no appeal. The funds have been raised principally among labor unions and it is believed that the imprisoned iron workers will be released during the week.

The announcement by United States District Attorney Charles W. Miller that he would make no fight on indemnified bonds or securities located outside of the state, provided they were satisfactory in other respects, has simplified the matter for the defendants' attorneys and they hope to have the necessary $1,070,000, or its equivalent, for the release of all the prisoners by the middle of the week at the latest. The time required in getting the bonds signed and approved by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson, who heard the trial, probably will delay freedom to the men until the end of the week.

Mrs. Philip A. Cooley and Mrs. Frank J. Higgins, wives of two of the convicted dynamite conspirators, said yesterday that they had received word to remain here until their husbands joined them. The two are the only women of a score or more who were here while their husbands were on trial who have remained.

BUYS NEW FACTORY SITE.

A. C. Aurentz Arranging for Enlargement of Canday Business.

A. C. Aurentz, proprietor of the Aurentz confectionery store, has made a deal with A. M. Reichelderfer whereby the former becomes the possessor of a lot 50x100 feet on Market place between Wayne and Washington streets. The consideration for the property was $1,500. Mr. Aurentz will erect a three-story brick building on the lot, and the barn which now stands there is to be razed at once. Increasing business has made the enlargement of the present quarters of the factory necessary. As soon as the new plant is put into operation Mr. Aurentz will add thirty new employes to his factory there.
